JULY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major department stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

A Deadly Secret

Authorities Pretend You Have To Stay Away from Piping Plovers Because They Are Endangered

By Dan Rattiner

Know how they shut down a beach every time a little bird known as a piping plover appears? Sammy's Beach in East Hampton is shut. Pike's Beach in Westhampton is shut. They say its because the plovers are nesting, and since they are an endangered species they must be allowed to nest undisturbed. Bull. Dan's Papers hereby blows the lid off the biggest lie on the East End.

The reason they have these KEEP OUT! PIPING PLOVER ENDANGERED SPECIES NESTING AREA signs is so as not to frighten the tourists.

Piping plovers, in spite of their small size, are among the most vicious and poisonous species on the planet. A bite from their sharp beak allows their poison laden tongues to inflict a vicious sting. The results are fatal.

The Piping Plovers are not endangered. Although scarce here on eastern Long Island, they exist by the millions along the beaches of Ecuador. In fact, when an animal innocently ventures onto the beach, the plovers kill and eat it almost instantly.

The Ecuadorians have tried everything. But no aerial spraying or other measure has been able to make the plovers go away. In fact, last year, a hunting expedition that went onto the beach with rifles was never seen again. Ever wonder why you never see the beaches of Ecuador promoted in travel magazines? Now you know.

Dan's Papers has decided it will no longer participate in this ruse about Plovers being an endangered species. If anything, our villages have too many tourists. Telling the truth might get them to go home. Or go to the Jersey Shore where there are no Piping Plovers. So now we write the truth.

What can you do if bitten by a Piping Plover? Not much. There is no known antidote for such a bite. Death takes place, painlessly, in a matter of seconds. You just fall over, asleep, and that's it.

How can you avoid being bitten? Plovers nest only on the beaches, so not going to the beach is one way. Another way, if you MUST go to the beach, is to make very slow movements when around Piping Plovers. Plovers are nearly blind. And there is considerable evidence that if you sneak quietly by, they will not notice you.

Try learning the call of the Piping Plover, which is COOOOAHHHHH, COOOAHHHH, and as you move slowly by, repeat it over and over. Make little scratching motions with your toe in the sand. You just might fool them.

Another thing you can do — if you must go to the beach — is wear heavy woolen knee socks. Piping plovers can only hop about a foot off the ground. That's it. And during the nesting season, they will not fly at all. Or you can try Chinese food. Plovers love Chinese food. Any kind. It seems to be the MSG. Plovers have been known to follow people home who feed them Chinese food.

Among those attending were his girlfriend Jennifer Lopez, Titanic star and bad guy, Billy Zane, designer Betsey Johnson, Sarah Jessica Parker, Matthew Broderick, Busta Rhymes, Russell Simmons, J-Z and Katie Ford.

In other Puffy news, a Brooklyn teenager has filed a $200 million dollar law suit against him claiming that her voice on one of his latest CD's portrays her in an unflattering light. Puffy was also seen captaining a touch football team in a fundraiser for voter registration last week. His team played one headed up by Def Jam chief Russell Simmons.

There was a wonderful birthday dinner party given by Lady Sharon Sondas of Sagaponack for her boyfriend, jewelery designer Geoffrey Thomas. Among those attending were Southampton's Marty Richards, Dana Hammond and her husband,

GREAT UNSUNG HEROES OF BORDEAUX

CARSIN 1990 BOTTLE CASE

(Premieres Cotes de Bordeaux) 10.95 131.40
Juha Beglund purchased this somewhat forgotten vineyard in 1990. Refurbishing the winery and vines soon became his passion and today his efforts are well reflected in the high quality wine of this wine. Full flavored with rich, ripe fruit. (4816)

BRIAND 1996 (Bordeaux Superieur) 8.95 107.40
Soft and delicately fruity with ripe cassis fruit and generous flavors. Fertile clay-limestone and sandy soil yield a wonderful wine here. (4813)

GARDUT 1998 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 9.49 113.88
One of the oldest properties of the region, Chateau Gardut has been in the Revaire family for 4 generations. Made from 75% Merlot, this 1998 is smooth and supple with a soft, ripe berry character, cocoa nuances and supple tannins. (4811)

JOUANIN 1996 (Cotes de Castillon) 9.95 119.40
Located along the right bank of the Dordogne River, the Cotes de Castillon produces a pleasing wine that offers immediate charm due to its high proportion of Merlot. (4801)

MAISON-NEUVE 1996 (Montagne-St. Emilion) 10.95 131.40

A superb combination of 60% Merlot, 30% Cabernet-Sauvignon and 10% Cabernet Franc, this 1996 combines uncommon backbone with a framboise scented, richly textured and agreeable style. (4805)

PEYRAUD 1996 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 8.95 107.40
Powerful and full, the wines from this small estate offer great value in Bordeaux excellence and have become one of our most popular Bordeaux. (4807)

ROC DE GRIMON 1996 (Cotes Castillon) 8.95 107.40
From one of Bordeaux's oldest winemaking regions, this vineyard sits on lush, fertile soil and produces supple, deliciously fruity wines. (4800)

ROLAND LA GARDE 1998 (Premieres Cotes de Blaye) 9.49 113.88
This is a warm, fruit laden wine that displays dense, concentrated flavors which is quite uncommon for the region and a direct result of late harvesting. Healthy, balanced tannins ensure long aging in the bottle. (4815)

ROUSTAING 1998 (Bordeaux) 8.95 107.40
This is a very old estate and still has a priory wall and window from the Middle Ages that is incorporated into the cellar. Very claret-like in style with a predominance of red berry fruit aromas and flavors, this 1998 is ripe and full bodied with a superb balance. (4803)

THEBOT 1996 (Bordeaux) 8.49 101.88
A delightful full-bodied red with vibrant fruit and a touch of spice. (4812)

DE VERDUN 1998 (Medoc) 10.49 125.88
This blend of Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot displays plenty of sweet strawberry fruit with a ripe texture and mouthfilling flavors. Delicious now, it will continue to thrive for many years. (4817)

VIEUX CHATEAU LONDON 1996 (Medoc) 14.95 179.40
A large proportion of Cabernet Sauvignon gives a classic structure to this wine. Aged in oak for a full year, it displays good body, intense cassis fruit and great harmony. (4814)

The Long Island Rail Road will be making major track improvements. Most branches will be affected.

From Saturday, July 15 to Sunday, August 13

The extensive track rehabilitation program begun in 1997 will resume on the Main Line west of Jamaica Station. Service will be affected as follows:

■ Hunterspoint Ave. Service

- ◆ Most Hunterspoint Ave. trains will be diverted to/from Long Island City starting Monday, July 17.
- ◆ At Long Island City, you may transfer to/from the 7 subway at the Vernon-Jackson Station, two blocks north.
- ◆ You may also transfer to the New York Waterway ferry service at Long Island City.

■ Main Line Service

- ◆ Six AM and three PM trains will be cancelled or combined on the Babylon, Far Rockaway, Hempstead, and Long Beach branches.
- ◆ Other trains will be adding stops.
- ◆ Service will remain the same to Kew Gardens, Forest Hills and Woodside. However, departure times may change slightly. There will also be one less AM peak train stopping at Woodside.

- ◆ During the week of August 7-11, there will be temporary platforms at Kew Gardens, Forest Hills, and Woodside.

- ◆ If you work in lower Manhattan, you can travel to the Flatbush Ave. Terminal and transfer there for Manhattan-bound subways.

■ Information Services

- ◆ Timetables dated July 15 include all Main Line changes.
- ◆ We urge all customers to pick up special timetables, brochures, or flyers outlining travel alternatives. Also, listen for Public Address announcements for more up-to-date information.

For more information, call the LIRR at 718-217-LIRR (NYC), 516-822-LIRR (Nassau), or 631-231-LIRR (Suffolk).

Why did Tiger choose TLC? He insisted on seeing the best.

Why did golfer Tiger Woods choose North America's leader for laser eye surgery? "After doing a lot of research, I felt TLC Laser Eye Centers had the experience and track record I demanded," says Tiger. "I am extremely pleased with the results." So are his fans.

Following surgery, Tiger went on to win 5-straight official PGA tournaments. A feat that hasn't been duplicated in over 50 years.

The Icon That Marks The Entrance To The Hamptons Is In Trouble

By Dan Rattiner

Linda Scott's six story high sculpture Stargazer in the farm field at the end of Manorville Road, a has remained a visible, triumphal, archway welcoming people to the Hamptons for more than ten years. People go past it, notice that it is designed as a magnificent deer eating a branch of a tree, make a left onto the Sunrise Highway and in five or ten minutes, turn off to Westhampton Beach, the first of the Hamptons.

Stargazer has been painted several times and about three years ago was vandalized and had to be repaired, but it has become an icon, almost as much as the Montauk Lighthouse or the Statue of Liberty or any other well known monument in these parts.

Now the monument is in trouble, its future in doubt and Linda Scott called the other day to ask if Dan's Papers might help out. I told her I certainly would.

It's not the first time Linda Scott has called. Once before Stargazer was in trouble and that was before it was even up on the Manorville Road. At the time she had completed it as a commission and suddenly had found that it would be unacceptable where it had been planned to go.

"Please call the East Hampton Town Supervisor," she asked back then. "Or write an article about this. It's a big archway sculpture, six stories high and commissioned by the Animal Rescue Fund on Daniels Hole Road in East Hampton. It's supposed to stand at the entrance to their property. Cars would drive through it. In fact, the town initially said that if we built it big enough so that ambulances and fire trucks could drive through it, it would be fine with them. But now, they have changed their mind."

Apparently, someone had pointed out to Supervisor Bullock that Stargazer – and that was of regulations about sculptures of that size, they would enforce signage regulations and that this was clearly unacceptable. The Stargazer could not go up where it was intended.

Please try and get them to let me put it there." Linda said. "Otherwise, help me find some other place for it."

"Like where?" I had asked.

"I have no idea." Linda said.

At the time of course, I had no idea what Linda was really talking about. I had no concept of what Stargazer looked like and all I could conjure up in my mind was something animal related large enough to over-arch a road. I called the supervisor but had the same bad luck that she had. I was really no help.

And then, about a month later, driving into New York City, there it was, in all it's glory, in the field, just off the east side of Manorville Road. Stargazer, By Linda Scott, the sign said. Thanks to Harvey Pollack, the man who owned the farm there, it had found a permanent home, or at least as much of a home as Harvey could guarantee. Keep it there fifty years, he had told Linda.

As the years went by, I spoke to Linda upon occasion and wrote about Stargazer and how it its original name – if placed on Daniels Hole Road at the entrance to the Animal Rescue Fund – could be a distraction for pilots setting up to land at the East Hampton Airport. It was right in line with the end of the runway. Perhaps someone might hit it with their wheels and go crashing down in flames. The supervisor had called ARF and ARF had put them in touch with Linda Scott. The supervisor told Linda that in the absence had been built, with a metal frame and wooden covering. It had cost her personally out of pocket about $20,000 to have the Trochio Steelworks move it from where it had lain in pieces in her studio to its location in Manorville.

"Why Manorville?" I asked.

"One day, driving out from the city," she said, "my German Shepherd started to sing out the window. When I looked at him I saw that he was wiggling his nose, smelling something and I smelled it too. This was the first place you could smell the ocean. I got the name of the property owner and called him."

I asked her how she had come to make such a big thing in the first place, getting this commission from the Animal Rescue Fund.

"The deer is the symbol of truth," she said, "and I accepted the commission to build something that size because I wanted to show my gifted son, Morgan, who was ten years old at the time, that if you have a talent, you should go for it and not shoot yourself in the foot or cut off an ear."

Linda had done other sculptures, much smaller, of heads of people looking skyward. Some were six or seven feet high. She'd been inspired by and had the advice of Robbie Young who had built the Skydome in Toronto, and of Richard Roth, who had built the World Trade Center.

Some of her smaller heads were on display on Butter Lane in Bridgehampton and in the grassy triangle across from the Southampton Railroad Station. She had been establishing herself in her career.

That was then however, and this is now. And the trouble that Stargazer is in, is that Linda Scott can no longer afford to maintain it.

"I've had a lot help from friends." She told me. "And I'm particularly grateful to Bobby Goodall the owner of Riverhead Building Supply and to Leonard Riggio of Barnes and Noble and a whole lot of other people. The Griffith's Foundation, Amagansett Lumber, Red Horse Market, Stucco of the Hamptons, Central Park Historical Society, Dryvit Paint and the Word Of Life Ministries. And Richard Ely Tree Service who donated bucket trucks.

"But after ten years I just can't go any farther on my own. I had to mortgage my house in Southampton and now with Morgan grown, I really want to sell the sculpture and use the money to buy a studio to work in. I simply can't afford to maintain it any more."

If Linda wants to sell it, she also has some ideas on how to do so and also has a goal of having it stay right where it is, since Harvey Pollack has said it could remain there.

"I think the best thing," she said, "is to sell it to a corporation. It could come in under a charitable donation of 501C, and serve as a corporate logo right where it is in Manorville or have a corporate name attached to it. There are so many people who drive by it to go out to the Hamptons and who can afford to do this on some corporate level.

"The price is negotiable. All I want out of it is to stop having to spend my own money and be able to set up a studio for myself of some kind."

Kill The Cats

This Writer's Not So Friendly Relationship With The Four Cats At His House

By Dan Rattiner

Somewhere there are good cats. They lie in your lap. They purr. They rub against your leg. These cats, I say, let them live. They add goodness to the world.

On the other hand, there are the cats at my house. Four of them. They go about their business. They pee on the couch. They throw up on the stove. I clean it up. They pee on the stove, they throw up on the couch. I clean that up. My daughter calls from San Francisco.

"How's my cat?" she asks.

Years ago, I learned I am allergic to cats. I'd have itchy eyes and sneeze. I'd break out in hives. I went to a doctor who did tests on my arms, injecting me with small amounts of cat dander, dog wax, dust mites, rose pollen and ragweed. A whole bunch of these things made small welts. One made a big welt.

"Cats," the doctor said, writing me a prescription for an antihistamine. "Once in each nostril, twice a day."

I lived a long time avoiding having a cat. It didn't seem hard to do. You just go along and you don't have one.

In 1988, however, my luck changed. My house burned down and while our new one was being built, we rented a house on Lila Lane in East Hampton across from that cemetery where painter Jackson Pollock is buried. The landlord had two orange cats and asked if I would take care of them for the year I would be there. I said I would. Mistake.

The orange cats took an immediate dislike to me. Then one day, my daughter, who was 16, came home with a black and white cat.

Lawrence College. A month after that, I moved into my new house, rebuilt on the site where the old one had burned. Mac, who had fought the two orange cats to a draw, came along. To this day, and 12 years later Mac is still around, Mac is easily identified by the tear in her ear inflicted by one or the other of the oranges. And I still remember the day we left that house, with the two oranges sitting on the front deck, their heads cocked curiously.

"Mac doing okay?" my daughter asks over the phone.

I won't bore you with the tales of how the other three cats came into my life, except to say that it has always begun with "Hey dad, guess what?" Ta Dah! A cat.

Of the three newer ones, the one

I have the closest relationship with, I guess you can call it that, is a calico creature we call H-Two-Oh who spends his (or her) days sitting on the edge of the upstairs bathroom sink. I get up in the morning, groggily roll out of bed, and stagger into the bathroom to brush my teeth.

There's H-Two-Oh. He's always doing the same thing, which is staring at the faucet. If it is dripping, he purrs and slinks excitedly back and

I am however, not above saying, just for the record... "Let's kill all the cats." It feels good saying that. Gets it out of my system.

"His name is Mac," daughter said. "He followed me home."

I petted him. "Nice Mac," I said. He bit me.

For the next eight months, Mac fought with the two orange cats. He'd made some sort of blood oath with my daughter about who should get top billing in the house, he or the two orange cats. That June, with the outcome of this battle still in the balance, my daughter graduated high school and three months after that, she went off to Sarah forth on the sink apron. If it is not dripping, he stares at it so as not to miss when it starts. I go to get the toothbrush out of the glass behind him. He looks at me. What's this?

That's our relationship.

It's not that I have not tried to be nice to the cats. I try tickling their stomachs. They run away. I try patting their heads. They claw at me. Then they feign biting and run away. What fun.

I try showing off the cats. "Our cats are great leapers," I say to a guest, putting a cat dish of food on the kitchen counter. A cat leaps up from the floor and commences eating. "How about that?"

"Cats," the guest says.

Four cats go through a box of cat food in two days. I try buying cheap cat food. They go through that. I buy the cheapest cat food. They go through that too. Four cats is a lot of cats.

I am not a bad person. I would not, for instance, put a cat in a microwave, although that is a remarkable idea if you think about it. I would not run over a cat. Blood on your tire. How would you explain it. I would not poison a cat. Maybe.

I am not, however, above saying, just for the record, every once in a while, "lets' kill all the cats." It feels good saying that. Gets it out of my system. Then I refill the cat feeder.

Anyway, come over to my house sometime. Meet the cats. Maybe you can get one to jump through a hoop. Or something.

Finally, it should be noted that piping plovers only have the active venom in their tongues when they are nesting. During the courting and mating season, which precedes the nesting season, the plovers are to be seen on the beach doing little mating dances and gently pecking and "French Kissing" one another. If you see plovers on the beach engaging in these activities, it is safe to go right up to them. Just go over, pick one up in one hand and stroke it gently with the palm of your other hand, smoothing its feathers down its back. It will bill and coo.

The nesting season lasts for just over a month, beginning with when the eggs are laid, usually in June. It's all over by the end of July, when the Piping Plover chicks are strong enough to fly, at which time the Plovers will head out in a v-formation to, among other places, Ecuador, where, shortly the chicks, now grown up birds, are ready to start families of their own.

People who have lived here awhile all know at least one person who has died from by a Piping Plover bite. In recent years, there have been beach closings at Main Street, Montauk, at Maidstone Beach and Two Mile Hollow in Amagansett, at Peter's Pond Beach and at Little Neck Road Beach in Southampton. And of course, we all remember the time, in August of '97, when that wealthy stock broker in Quogue, what's his name, ran out onto the beach in front of his house —the beaches are all owned by the public from the high water mark down and it had been making him crazy, — yelled at some piping plovers to get off his property, got stung and died.

Finally, keep in mind that only the piping plovers with the red eyes are poisonous. Piping plovers with blue or brown eyes are completely harmless and will not bother you at all.

In any case, while the plovers are nesting, which they usually do with their eyes closed, it is better to be safe than sorry. If you see a piping plover on the beach with red eyes, immediately call 631-585-781. Then get the hell out of there.

Hats Off To Police

How Hard They Work And Other Stories That Turn Up On The Police Blotter

By Dan Rattiner

If you ever wondered how difficult it could be to be a police officer in a small town, even on just an ordinary day, all you have to do is read what happened to officer Tom Miller at 10:30 in the evening last Thursday night. He was driving up Stephen Hands Path in East Hampton that evening when a woman in a white van roared past him, apparently oblivious of the fact that he was driving a police car. Miller speeded up, noted that she had failed to stop at the stop sign at Stephen Hands Path and Bull Path and put on his flashing lights to indicate that she should pull over.

It took a while but after a hundred yards or so, she finally got the message and did so. Officer Miller got out of his car – he was parked behind her – and walked over to the drivers side and asked her to roll down the window. “Let me see your license and registration,” he asked.

The registration was in order, but when he went back to his police car to check her license he found that it had expired in 1994. He now had three summonses for her and the combination of all three meant that he would make an arrest.

He returned to the window and handed the woman back her registration and license. The license identified her as Tracy Aragona of Ann Arbor, Michigan. He told her she should get out of the car and come with him since she could drive no further without a valid license. Instead, she rolled up the window and roared off, running over Officer Miller’s foot as she did so.

Miller, in great pain, hobbled back to the car and once again gave chase this time calling for back-up to join him. Finally, about a half a mile through the window or around the open door – but in any case, she bit him again several times. They were now handcuffed together and it was only after the second police car pulled up and screeched to a halt and two more officers got out and they were able to subdue her.

Miller went to the Southampton Hospital where he was treated for his bites and his run over feet, which amazingly were not seriously injured. Ms. Aragona has a court date in late July.

Here’s another item from the Police Blotter in East Hampton, though not from the town but the village. It involves a nineteen old teenage boy named David C. Bell of Glade Road in Springs and two friends of his, or maybe they are not friends of his, who are under the age of eighteen and therefore we shall draw a curtain over their names and not reveal them.

David Bell walked into a store in downtown East Hampton where a Village Police officer observed him buying two cigars and then bringing them out and giving them to the two underage boys. He was given a summons for unlawful dealing with a child, which carries a penalty of a twenty-five dollar fine.

Instead, she rolled up the window and roared off, running over Officer Miller’s foot as she did so.

he caught up with her again, this time at the corner of Stephen Hands Path and Squires Lane.

Again, he ordered her to roll down the window, which she did, and now he reached in and took the keys out of the ignition, the standard procedure of what to do under those circumstances.

“Get out of the car, Miss,” he said.

She sat still saying nothing, so he took out his handcuffs and clapped them on her wrist at which point she bit him on his index finger. A tussle ensued – it is not clear to me whether this was

There's a story here but I can't quite figure it out.

My all-time favorite Police Blotter story occurred up in the Springs in East Hampton earlier this year. A couple was watching television one evening in their living room, when they heard a large crash coming from the front porch. Getting up they saw a pick-up truck had come right through it. Pieces of screening, gutters, shingles and beams were wrapped around the whole front of the car. Its headlights blazed into the livingroom. As they stood in silence observing this amazing sight not fifteen feet from them, the driver of this car leaned forward, looked down and turned the ignition to try and re-start the car. If he backed out quietly nobody would notice.

I've been an admirer of the Police Blotter for many, many years. We never used to have it in this paper since we cover the entire East End region, but in the late 1980's it occurred to me that there always seemed to be one or two stand out Police Blotter items in each of the small weeklies that cover the different towns on the East End. I had a reporter read them and collect the funniest of them, and we ran them as a column entitled The Best of the Police Blotter.

It didn't seem important to me the items were two weeks old; the stories were so remarkable. We've been publishing it weekly since and about three years after we began, Police Blotter items of this level of hilarity began appearing in Newsday and some of the other weekly papers. Today, in almost any small city or region that you go to in the country, you'll find the "Best of the Police Blotter."

I wish I could have patented the idea or copyrighted it. Failing that however, I am glad to have been able to make a contribution to American journalism that basically shows just how stupid criminal behavior can be.

Founding Father Of Five

Law Professor Gordon-Reed Talks About Thomas Jefferson At Southampton College

By Ben Amato

Re-imagine history. That was the message delivered by author and law professor Annette Gordon-Reed at the Writers on Writing Lecture at Southampton College last week. Thomas Jefferson lived two lives. As the father of the Declaration of Independence, he stands as a giant marble historical image, a man whose ideas helped shape this country. In his other life, he was an elderly widowed slave owner, who fathered a family of five children with Sally Hemings, his beautiful teenaged mulatto slave.

Annette Gordon-Reed's book Thomas Jefferson and Sally Hemings: An American Controversy, reshapes this story from a ridiculed rumor dating back two centuries into a near historical certainty. Recent DNA evidence merely confirms what any reader of Professor Gordon-Reed already knew. Thomas Jefferson was a complex man, pursuing a political career as Secretary of State, Vice President and President while at the same time fathering children with his slave and "concubine" of thirty-eight years, back on his Monticello, Virginia plantation.

The Hollywood movie Jefferson in Paris recently stirred up this controversy, which dates back to the early 1800s. Though it was very common for colonial white men to use their enslaved women for sexual gratification, the portrait painted by the film and a few "pioneering" historians was of a complex man filled with divergent and "dangerous" views on race, slavery, freedom and a slave his wife Martha Jefferson inherited from her parents. Sally was actually Martha's half sister, for they had the same father, John Wayles.

While promoting the necessity of public education for citizens in a democratic republic, Jefferson never taught his mixed sons and daughter to read or write. But he made sure they were taught music and carpentry, livelihoods both sons would excel in during their adult lives as freed slaves. Though never publicly acknowledging these children, Professor Gordon-Reed pointed out that they were allowed "a greater" range of freedom than other slaves. Jefferson even named them after his friends and honored relatives: two daughters named Harriet (one who died in infancy) and sons Beverley, Madison and Easton.

Though owning hundreds of slaves, he did not want his "colored" family to remain enslaved. He reportedly helped his daughter Harriet and son Beverley to escape and upon his death, left provisions in his will to free Sally, their remaining children, her mother, brothers and nephews.

the future of American society. According to Professor Gordon-Reed, "Jefferson's view of America was that the whites could never give up their prejudice and the blacks could never forgive (them) for slavery."

So while expounding a segregated future, he created a racially mixed family with Sally Heming,

Jefferson's relationship with Sally is also one of confused devotion. Using slaves for sex was common and Jefferson publicly admitted he did so in his "youth." But once the recently widowed Jefferson met Sally, their 38 year relationship resembled a marriage, though one somewhat concealed. Professor Gordon-Reed discussed how during a stay in Paris with Jefferson, Sally and her brother had the opportunity to petition the French government for their freedom. Both choose not to and they returned to enslavement at Montecello, where over the next two decades Sally and Jefferson conceived all five children.

"Why would she come back here? This was not a typical master slave relationship. For at least 20 years, he had an interest in Sally....and this was more than a sexual interest he had for his wife's half sister." But Gordon-Reed also noted during her lecture that whether there was love, lust, rape or consent in their relationship is unknown. This then raises another bitter issue. "Can you have anything like consent if the woman is a slave?" Professor Gordon-Reed asked, noting the brutal attitudes held by the slave owners of the late 1700s.

In an article titled "Why Jefferson Scholars Were the Last to Know," Annette Gordon-Reed comments on the "protective shield" that surrounds the Jefferson myth, which stops many historians from re-evaluating compelling evidence. "The dehumanization of blacks, which began with slavery, haunts us to this very day and distorts historical perspectives... The most important historical witness in this story is undoubtedly Madison Heming, who asserted in his memoir, published in 1873, that he, Beverley, Harriet and Eston were the children of Jefferson and Sally Hemings. This memoir gives us the most detailed account we have of... the private Thomas Jefferson in close detail. Yet in the eyes of many historians, Hemings' race and status as a former slave made him an unfit and possibly unreliable contributor to our understanding of the past."

Gordon-Reed gleefully concluded her lecture feeling "slightly victorious, for a lot of slave owners had children. These black people have a place in writing history. Madison's memoirs are a Rosetta Stone in knowing Thomas Jefferson. Blacks have a voice in writing history."

Professor Gordon-Reed will have a role in putting history onto paper. Her plans "for the next ten years" include assisting Vernon Jordan with his memoirs, while researching and writing about Sally Hemings and the life of her children. She will also be teaching as an associate professor at New York Law School.

"My life has changed," Annette said, "...a historical controversy was solved by science..." and now everyone "has to take a different look at what had been written before." During a recent visit to Monticello, Annette overheard a tour guide explain the role Sally Hemings played in Jefferson's life. Now, for the first time, visitors have to re-imagine history to include this man and woman, from different races, who shared thirty-eight critical years in the history of early America.

Children Of Holocaust Survivors Hear Speech By Author Of On Burning Ground

By Joan Zandell

The children of holocaust survivors are members of a peculiar club. Unlike the majority of Americans, when holocaust survivors and their children get together, they don't sip martinis and reminisce about their relatives who came over on the Mayflower and later founded Ivy League Universities. They don't discuss their golf scores or their stock portfolios. First and foremost Holocaust survivors eat, as a reminder that there were terrible times when there was nothing to eat, prompting a remembrance that there have been times throughout history when Jews were systematically starved. After they have eaten, Holocaust survivors discuss instead in which concentration camps their parents and other relatives were murdered shortly after the Nazi government confiscated their homes and possessions as part of the Government's ongoing re-organization plan. They reminisce about relatives long gone and the ways in which they were brutally murdered. In many cases the survivors were forced to watch as their parents, wives and children were killed before their very eyes. Some Holocaust survivors even choose to be buried in mass plots, areas of the Jewish cemetery organized according to the names of the concentration camps that they survived.

The numbers tattooed on their arm, the things they needed to do in order to survive, the unspeakable horrors they witnessed and remember, coupled with their guilt and self-hatred for having survived, become the survivor's identity for the remainder of their lives. A mysterious by-product of being the child of Holocaust survivors is that somehow, whether the war was discussed at home or not,

and may consider themselves technically Jewish, but perhaps they practice Zen Buddhism. They may speak fluent German, and also fluent Hebrew, in addition to English. They may have been born and have grown up in places like New York City or Los Angeles, but at home with their parents they were living in post war Berlin.

By today's standards, the survivors would have been diagnosed with post-traumatic-stress-disorder. But in those days, when someone overreacted, everyone simply whispered, "SSShhh, pay no attention, he's like that because of the war," and everyone understood what that meant and took pity on him. These are some of the small everyday realities of being a child of Holocaust survivors and growing up in that world. So it comes as no children of survivors feel as if they've somehow lived through their parent's reality. This inherited darkness and rage is the legacy of the child of the Holocaust. Some children of survivors live with a bag packed by the door at all times, all their money in bank accounts around the world, owning little, just in case it happens again and they have to get away quickly. Many children of Holocaust survivors do not attend synagogue. They may believe in God surprise that Michael Skakun, the only son of two Holocaust survivors, would choose to write his father's extraordinary wartime memoir.

On Sunday morning at the Bagel's and Books presentation of the Cultural and Educational Committee of the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, Michael Skakun stood before a room filled with Holocaust survivors, children of Holocaust survivors, and people fascinated by or obsessed with the Holocaust. While waiting for him to appear, people in the audience exchanged harrowing survival stories as if they were talking about going out to get a soda at the corner store. The room smacked of fury and sorrow. There was a woman with a heavy French accent telling her story in an upbeat tone with a huge smile on her face. I sensed a kind of desensitization on the part of the deliverer; as if over time, these dreadful stories had become about something else, and had miraculously happened to someone else, in another time and place.

Listening to the lightness, witnessing the complete absence of emotion or connection to the material being communicated accompanied by a disconnected laugh, was unnerving in the extreme. As we were being seated I overheard a woman encouraging someone to purchase Skakun's book, "You should get it. It's a terrific read. It'll keep you awake at night." And on that extraordinary note, the reading began.

Michael Skakun looks as if he could be a Hasidic Scholar. He is a man with a slight build who is wearing a suit. He has curly brown hair atop a pale face with glasses. He claims that he wrote his father's memoir to "attempt to capture the solitary anguish of survival." The questions the author had to grapple with were: How could an innocent and protected Talmudic Scholar school himself in the art of deception? How does the mind encompass the journey from scholar to SS Waffen Officer? Ethically and morally, do the means justify the ends?

Skakin's book, On Burning Ground, tells the story of how his father survived the war – through the use of a series of multiple identities. Initially, he was told that he did not look Jewish – he had blond hair and blue eyes. With that knowledge it occurred to him that through fortuitous opportunities, combined with his own wits – his ability to think on his feet as a direct result of his Talmudic training, he just might be able to con the enemy into believing that he was one of them. He transformed himself into a Polish Catholic/Muslim, part Tartar, part Muslim, part Pole, complete with false identity papers. So successful was the con, that by the time the war ended, Skakun's father Joseph managed to apply to and be accepted by the most prestigious area of the Nazi forces, the SS Waffen.

Skakun told a silent room of listeners of how his father passed a medical exam, where he was forced to expose his circumcised penis (he was pretending to be a Muslim, and Muslims are also circumcised) as well as a racial suitability exam that was so extensive in its questioning, that it was almost like an interrogation.

Not unusual in the course of the examination was to grill the young initiate about his family tree, going back as many generations as possible. Just as the young man was nervously starting to run out of made up relatives and feared that he might be found out, a shaft of light fell across his blond hair, lightened by the summer sun. In that moment, the Nazi interrogator stopped, gazed directly at him, laughed and said that all his fears were dispelled, after all, how could someone with such beautiful blond hair and such perfect features be anything but Aryan? He was approved and sent back to the work farm to await mobilization orders. But those mobilization orders never came because the Russians invaded. Now Joseph Skakun

preview: peter matthiessen

By Joan Zandell

In Peter Matthiessen's most recent book, Tigers in the Snow, he says, "Wherever the species occurs, the tiger resides at the summit of its ecosystem." The Amur tiger, the adored subject of Tigers in the Snow, requires at least ten pounds of meat per day. And that at times includes the occasional human. Over the past four centuries Asian tigers are said to have devoured approximately one million people. How those figures compare to the amount of Tigers we have killed will never be known. This dance draws a mysteriously strong connection between man and this beautiful cat. It confirms that man is not the only animal capable of sudden violence. The cat hunts in order to eat, and we happen to become its prey. We kill the cat to consume and use the body parts – the penis and the coat – that we believe will makes us equally potent to our kill: eating and adornment as metaphor.

Matthiessen makes a compelling argument for the peaceful coexistence between humans and tigers. Their extinction would not only upset the world's ecology, he claims it would destroy some essential aspect of our collective imagination.

Because the large cat is known for its remarkable hearing, in Java, hunters keep their nose hairs trimmed lest the tiger hear a whistle of air blowing through their nostrils.

Whereas Muslim hunters in Indonesia believe that the tiger has been empowered by Allah to protect the faithful and devour the transgressors.

In Hindu mythology Shiva the destroyer is often depicted with a tiger's face, whereas in Buddhist symbolism the tiger represents anger. In Islamic and Taoist imagery the deities ride tigers, while in western literature Rudyard Kipling paints the picture of a man eating tiger in The Jungle Book and in Little Black Sambo, Helen Bannerman tells the children's story of tigers who run themselves ragged into a puddle of butter.

In Classical Chinese astrology the tiger was the symbol of the power of the life force, abundance and strength. When Mao Tse Tung declared the tiger the "enemy of man" in 1959, the Chinese eradicated the "pests" from the landscape, effectively castrating the Chinese imagination.

The male tiger's potency "which permits it to mate vigorously several times each hour through a period of several days" makes the Tiger's genitalia a highly desirable commodity fetching as much as $2500 for a dried penis in Singapore or Taiwan, whereas hot penis soup goes for $300 a bowl. The Chinese are willing to pay a middleman $10,000 for a tiger. In the 1990's, Chinese clients were willing to pay as much as $25,000 for a tiger.

Apparently, at present there are more tigers in captivity in private ownership in Texas than there are free tigers in the rest of the world.

After the collapse of the Soviet Union, economic review: born to be queen

By Jan Silver

Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton opened their eighth season July 7 and 8 with a staged reading of Marsha Lee Sheiness' new play Born To Be Queen. Events in the play take place during the mid-twelfth century and recount the life of French-born Eleanor of Aquitaine from birth through her 29th year. Eleanor evidently was a fascinating woman far ahead of her time, but this drama has so many brief scenes that a viewer never develops a strong sense of who Eleanor is.

As now written, it is a chronological chain of events, more like an historical documentary film than a stage play. It is not as involving as the filmed version of Henry Fielding's Tom Jones, a series of adventures in one character's life linked by a voice-over narration and mischievous music. Here Eleanor does narrate her story but the bridges between scenes are the sound of galloping horses. This would get a bit tedious on a stage—character development and building up the drama with fewer scenes is needed.

The heart of the play is the first 14 years of Eleanor's adult life—she came from a rebellious noble family and received a nobleman's education; she married the King of France and then Henry Plantagenet, who became King of England; she battled with the Church and Pope; she led the Second Crusade; she bore many children including Richard the Lion-Hearted—perhaps this is too much for one play.

It is too long. A subplot involving Eleanor's sister Petronilla in a love triangle distracts from the main story. If it is meant to show the continual power struggle between the Holy Roman Church and European heads of state, these machinations are already well illustrated in Eleanor's own story.

Playwrights' Theatre continues to bring well-trained actors and directors in for its staged readings. The cast and director for Born To Be Queen were superior, especially with four actors playing more than 20 parts. Gwendolyn Lewis was winning as Eleanor, often showing flashes of an intelligent, clever, passionate queen despite the too-numerous scenes. Scott Harrison as Louis Capet, the religious King of France, made clear the conflicted nature of his character but the many short scenes weaken the anguished bewilderment of this man raised in a monastery who, in his naivete, causes many deaths and loses his beloved wife.

Rick Frederick brought warmth and passion to his many roles as Eleanor's grandfather and uncle, Louis Capet's mentor Abbot Suger, and the young and kingly Henry Plantagenet. Tall, slender Geoffrey Blaisdell impressively morphed from King Louie the Fat, to several church dignitaries including two Popes. Susan Wallack added a touch of humor with her multiple roles as Petronilla, Dangereuse, and Adelaide. Suzanne Tören was extremely adroit shifting between the roles of Philippa, Raoul's wife, Elaine and Empress Irene. Broadway director Robert Kalfin, with only one day's rehearsal, set a swift pace for his actors which they embraced with thorough professionalism.

Producers Mitzi and Perry Pazer's format for Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton involves the audience. Mitzi Pazer introduces the play and it is performed, then a brief discussion between playwright and audience is led by Perry Pazer, and finally refreshments are served to close the evening. This Friday and Saturday (July 14 & 15), Turning Points by Elsa Rael featuring Marilyn Rockafellow will go on at 9 p.m. In two weeks, July 28 & 29, Fellow Traveler by John Herman Shaner will be staged. The last play this season is Homesick by Tamar Cole, to be performed on August 4 & 5. Tickets are $15 and should be reserved by calling 631-329-9909. Performances are on a raised stage at LTV Studios, 75 Industrial Rd. (take Montauk Highway to East Hampton Airport/Daniels Hole Rd.).

hardship combined with freedom and lawlessness resulted in an upsurge in the poaching of elk and other large animals, combined with aggressive timber harvesting, damaging the habitat and deleting the tiger's food supply. This is the greatest obstacle to the tiger's survival. Siberia, long known for its harsh climate makes having enough to eat a problem for both man and cat.

Hornocker's Siberian Tiger Project was created in 1989, and just in time, setting off a chain reaction of other efforts to "Save the Tiger." The New York Times reported recently that tiger biologists are cautiously optimistic about the number of tigers in places like India and Southeast Asia, due primarily to a series of governmental conservation efforts in those areas.

Writes Matthiessen, "In arguing for heroic efforts on behalf of tigers, one could cite the critical importance of biodiversity as well as the interdependence...but finally these abstractions seem less vital than our instinct that the aura of a creature as splendid as any on our earth, infusing man's life with myth and power and beauty, could only be struck from our experience of creation at a terrible cost."

Peter Matthiessen is the acclaimed author of numerous works of fiction and nonfiction. His accomplishments as a naturalist and explorer have resulted in more than a dozen books on natural history and the environment, including The Tree Where Man Was Born, which was nominated for the National Book Award, and The Snow Leopard, for which he won the award. His equally distinguished career as a fiction writer has produced a collection of stories and eight novels, among them At Play in the Fields of the Lord, which was nominated for a National Book Award, Far Tortuga, and the Everglades trilogy, which includes his most recent book, Bone by Bone. Tigers in the Snow is Peter Matthiessen's thirtieth book.

In Tigers in the Snow, accomplished wildlife photographer Maurice Hornocker, the co-founder of the Siberian Tiger Project and director of the Hornocker Wildlife Institute at the University of Idaho, joins him. Hornocker is also a professor in the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife and has contributed to National Geographic. Together they tell the story of this magnificent cat that ironically can only be photographed and tracked in captivity.

Peter Matthiessen will be at Guild Hall on Sunday, July 16, at 5 p.m. talking about his latest book and reading from Tigers in the Snow. •

The Sheltered Island By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER #114 SOMETIMES A GREAT NOTION...

My kids left June 28 to visit their Dad in Seattle. Its so amazing how different life is without the demands of children. You forget what life is like without nagging someone to pick up towels, brush their teeth and put on clean clothes. Since they left, I've spent about $40 on food that I actually like. I've run the dishwasher twice. I don't have to get in my car unless I'm the one going somewhere! It's a whole new level of life.

I'm discovering new things about Shelter Island.

I've wanted to attend the Society of Friends meeting (Quakers 10:30 am on Sunday mornings) since I got here, and last week I did. It was wonderful to sit in nature and look up on the underside of the leaves and watch the light dance while attempting to quiet the noise in your head, several of my personalities enjoyed it.

I'm always reminded to walk when I see this lovely lady who walks all over the Island. I don't know who she is, I wave to her whenever I see her, she has to be the premier walker on Shelter Island. She reminds me and inspires me to go for my daily waddle.

I'm actually getting to the yard sales I circled in the Reporter. I don't have to monitor anyone while I look. No one tells me they're bored, lets go. I don't have to buy extra stuff to placate the kids who got dragged along.

When the phone rings.... it's for me! Even better, when I'm on the phone, no one has to interrupt me with urgent questions, like, "Mom, whats the population of China?"

No one has to talk to me through the door when elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

A friend came to me this week with a story that deserves repeating. He works for an old friend of my family. This friend is a wonderful energetic woman of 85. She is not a complainer!

On Friday, June 30th, our friend, Grace, ran out of cooking gas. She has the system where there are two large cylinders of gas. One is a reserve tank and the other the "active" tank. On the thirtieth, both tanks were found to be empty. Her gas company is a company called Synergy. She called the company and was told someone would be out on Saturday. Saturday morning Grace went out for breakfast, or at least tried to. Saturday was the beginning of the Fourth of July weekend. There was no parking anywhere near the Candy Kitchen in Bridgehampton. Finding an easy place to park without having to walk far became an impossible challenge in Bridgehampton. Her all round handyman, cook, driver said they ended up driving around for quite a while and eventually found a bakery where they could get a little something to eat. The tank was still not full when they returned.

Monday, July third brought no relief. Tuesday the fourth, no one delivered gas. Wednesday brought no help. The company employee promised that the gas would come the next day and the next day and finally the next day. No go! As of Sunday the ninth there was still no gas. Grace tried to change gas companies. She was told by LIPA there is no way to switch. How is it possible that there are no emergency services to look out for old people? Grace is an energetic active person but that doesn't change the fact that she's eighty-five. It is easy to buy take out for lunch and dinner. Eating out everyday for breakfast, lunch and dinner takes a lot of doing. Eating take out becomes old after a few days especially with no way to heat the food.

I called Lilco a few years ago to try to get a natural gas hookup. I was told that even though I live very close to the service line, there is a moratorium on new gas hookups. When LIPA took over I called Keyspan (the gas company that works with LIPA) and was told that they would take my name in case there were any changes. I still work with LP (liquid propane) just like Grace. I have small tanks and can take them to be filled. It's a bother but at least I don't run out.

Grace's employee is from the former Soviet Union. He can't believe what's happening. He said it seems like the Soviet Union. He comes by every few days to keep me posted. We have so much pride in America. We like to think that we take good care of our old people. We think our emergency services are wonderful. What's wrong with this picture?

had to convince the Russians that he was a Tartar and a Muslim and not a collaborator. After liberation, he joined the Allied forces. In 1948, he went to Paris where he finally returned to his Rabbinical studies and the life of an orthodox Jew.

Skakun's father did not choose to become a Rabbi after the war, but instead became a diamond dealer and later owned a printing business. And he continually talked to his son and his wife about his younger days as an imposter and how he fooled the enemy and survived the war.

I'm in the bathroom.

I can stay up as late as I want. I don't have to lay down with my son until he falls asleep.

I pick up the house in the morning - and it looks the same in the afternoon. How does this happen?

I have clean towels and washclothes whenever I need them. I haven't had to dry off with a dirty towel grabbed out of the laundry basket since they left.... I could get used to this.

I went to a movie. I went when I wanted to go, and I didn't have to spend the equivalent of the gross national product of Ghana at the concession stand.

Last Sunday, I went to a brunch. I haven't been to a brunch in over fifteen years. My new friend Jean G. had a wonderful brunch in her lovely shady yard and I got to meet some local writers and artists. I met this extremely interesting artist/writer couple. We talked about books. The lady told me I have to read Angela's Ashes. I was so flattered to be mistaken as literate and bright enough to read a whole book.

It's interesting how the Universe tries to help you when you resolve to do something. Long before I knew the kids' travel plans, I resolved to finish my novel and submit my "feeler" letters by my birthday on July 31.

I was searching my brain for whom I could ask

Most children of Holocaust survivors will tell you that their parents were and continue to be larger than life. Most of them live with enormous guilt and fear of reprisals. It goes without saying that the war and the desire for survival brought out parts of people's human-ness (however, not necessarily their humanity) that never would have come to light in times of peace. On Burning Ground is one such story. Elie Weisel says of the book,

"On Burning Ground is a riveting, gut-wrenching tale of survival under the most extreme conditions. It is an infernal journey to the end of night, capturing the visceral danger and spiraling suspense of a man outwitting his destiny...Joseph Skakun, his story brilliantly retold by his son, is an extraordinary account of one man's battle for life and of his courage in the face of incalculable odds." On Burning Ground, a Son's Memoir by Michael Skakun, is published in America by St. Martin's Griffin. It is a remarkable read, and its contents WILL keep you up at night.

I know I'll finish my novel by my birthday as planned. The universe is helping me this month. Everyone else will have to manage on their own for awhile. It's clearly my turn.

Ted Fields Party

The mention of that title conjures up one line among many Hamptonites: "Can you get me in?" During the July 4th weekend each year, movie and music mogul, Ted Field who speaks softly, but carries big clout, has a party in the Hamptons. And each year about 600 of his closest friends are invited and about 5,000 of his other friends try to get in, uninvited. For those who tried unsuccessfully and those who are just curious, here is one person's brief account: We drove to Wainscott looking for Ted's rented summer homes on a street we did not know. Could we find it? When we drove through the normally serene neighborhood, the party seem to rise from the senerity. Here were hundreds of people parking their cars on the side of the road and walking towards the mecca. So we did the same. At the driveway were more guards than we saw at two President Clinton events out here. "The List" was the bible no entry on the list, no entry into the party. There was one guy in charge and if Steve Rubell has come back from the grave, he was at the gate. Maybe so, because the party was a retro theme. Once inside there was one tent for food. The line for food was short. Now, I think I need to tell you here that Ted Fields parties have a ratio of about seven women to every guy, and six of every seven have waists and ages in the low twenties. So few were eating. There was another area for gelato, where you had to walk through a lantern lit path to an area where 60s stlye tie-dye blankets were on the grass for those who wanted quiet moments or whatever. One woman who "got in" was cell phoning her disappointed friends in the driveway giving thee the skinny on the party. Another tent was for dancing and canoodling as gossip columnists seem to say. Here was a mix of those from Hollywood including some hot agents who flew in for the happening, others from Miami social scene and of course from the Hamptons. The DJ was mixing Bee Gees with rap with great success. Icing the cake were celebrities, who in this mass of hunky and sexy women were difficult to spot. I did see two icons of the past, boxing legend "Smokin" Joe Frazier the co-star of the "Thriller from Manila" and Betsey Johnson who created some of the ratio outfits the guests were wearing. As we were leaving, we met an acquaintance just coming in who asked how the party was. I replied: "The party's great fun, and but would be incredible if you were a guy."

Della's House

Della Rounick, who beautifies every party she attends, had her own bash to celebrate her new home in Southampton. The theme was festive-Havana and some dressed the part, while others stayed in the Southampton uniform of blue blazers for him and long print dresses for her. She invited people she has met on the party circuit, so the guest list was like a recipe which included a blend of Southamptonities, a dash of several well known successful women, members of the ladies-only investment club I belong to, that is ironically called "the Chanel Cash Club," for spice, a group of friends who seem to show up at lots of parties they look good and dance great, and a smatter of Europeans. The party started off with cocktails and had the guys congregating near the pool, talking and some bragging, maybe exaggerating, about their golf games, much like fish stories in other communities, and some of the women talking about or better described complaining, about contractors and other service companies out here. Once dinner was complete, the DJ turned the calypso-rock music and the dance floor like the sirens in the sea stories, beckoned all.

Polo Preview

For those panting for the sound of hustling horse hooves or hustling bachelors, it will be soon Polo time in the Hamptons. To celebrate this equine eventuality Neil Hirsch's New York City home was filled with guests last week. Before you can say "Can I have your number?" it will be tent time in Bridgehampton and the polo players will be racing down the field.

East End Open

The secret's out. The East End Open has become such a resounding success that it is now a Hampton's "must do." This year's all day event had over 300 participants and raised an incredible $200,000 for the East End Hospice. What started as a glimmer of imagination from Sue Katz and a few other ladies on a Westhampton tennis court, has become a model for community volunteerism. Last week, Westhampton Sport and Tennis again hosted the East End Open where tennis players of all levels, shapes and sizes could play in a round robin format. For those who were spectators there were activities from wellness and massage to beauty to eating. Yes, eating because the Open served breakfast lunch and dinner. And to blow off the steam from the games and for those who wanted to tell others about the "could of's and should of's," there was evening schmoozing, entertainment and dancing. What tells the story was the essence of the comments of the attendees and those volunteers with aching muscles exhausted from helping out around all day, "It was well worth it!"

LongHouse Honor's Rumi

Dan's Papers Goes To...

A Persian Fete - a celebration honoring the poet Rumi took place at LongHouse Reserve on Saturday July 8th. Rumi's work was being quoted by Buddhists, Hindus, Sufis, & Christians alike. These gifts of words touch us deeply. The music, words, and whirling dervish left us with a strong impression of this extraordinary being. Instead of a "goody bag" we were given these words: "The words we said to one another are stored in the secret heart of heaven. Someday, like rain, they'll fall and our mystery will grow green all over the world." - Rumi

Bay Street Gala 2000

Photos and Text By Barry Gordin

A most brilliant Hampton day transformed with a sumptuous golden sunset, hues of blue and lavender clouds, over a mercurial blue bay surrounded the star studded tented dock. Sybil Christopher (a founding member of Bay Street) now in its 8th season established a playwright program in 14 local schools. The productions at Bay Street have heart and lots of intelligence. There are themes about the area and classics. The sentiment is infectious. Get involved so as not to lose a valuable form of genuine human expression. It's a first class theatre.

Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend

The stars and diamonds sparkled and shined at the opening of The Mayfair Diamond & Fine Jewelry store at The Parrish Mews in East Hampton. Coecles Harbor, The Rock, and Hareleggers?

By Pamela Gibson

When the last ferry leaves The Rock, and there is no public transportation off-island until the next morning, people clearly fall into two categories: those that feel comforted, secure, safe, and those that feel trapped, marooned, isolated. Falling into the former category, but accompanied by my teenage son who is definitely in the later category, we ventured to Shelter Island, The Rock, according to locals, in search of sanctuary, secrets, and Hareleggers.

Shelter Island, 8,000 acres of astounding New England beauty between the East End Forks, has a long history of providing a haven for non-conformists seeking freedom from persecution. The first settlers to stay, Nathaniel Sylvestry and his sixteen year old wife, Grissel, established a fine manor house, which is today the site of an archeological dig that can be tracked daily, by anyone with a computer at www.shelter-island.org. Shortly after settling the Sylvestry family, not unfamiliar with religious intolerance, began to provide sanctuary to the long persecuted Quakers from Massachusetts. These often destitute refugees, having fled from a precarious life in Europe, arrived in Massachusetts to find a similarly intolerant culture, where they were imprisoned, tortured, and stripped of all their remaining possessions. They must have felt as if there was nowhere to hide, nowhere to raise and protect their families. It is to the Sylvestry Family's credit that they chose to share their piece of heaven, establishing a tolerant, free thinking culture that is a unique tradition even today.

Indeed, while other East End communities were Pro-British, or at least keeping a low profile, during the American Revolution, Shelter Islanders were decidedly revolutionary at a time when Sag Harbor, considered as important a port as New York Harbor, hosted a strong British troop presence near by. Once again, the Shelter Islanders chose to stand apart for individual rights.

Later the Methodists seeking a safe haven would establish a retreat tent community in the area that is now The Heights. The Chequit Inn, now a year round highly popular restaurant, pub, and Inn, was the original communal kitchen for this freedom seeking community and in time the tents became beautiful victorian gingerbread much sought after homes, then oddly without kitchens.

Just on the other side Coecles Harbor, a port on the East End of Shelter Island, has long been a place I dream of when a serene place to hide is required. As a child my family spent many summers living on one leaking sailboat after another, from the last day of school to the first day of the next school term. The most important equipment on board was always the bilge pump. My parents, adventurous, a little nutty, and certainly seeking refuge from their usual business lives, would arrive with their four children, usually four or five other people's children and several other families of co-conspirators on other similarly precarious wooden sailboats. Enough people to leave a lasting impression as they pillaged and ransacked their way east to Shelter Island. We always stopped first in Dering Harbor, but every year something would happen, and my father would hastily pull up anchor and escape to Coecles (pronounced Cockles) Harbor. My mother, the worst or best of the lot, depending on your point of view, was a positive genius when it came to finding new ways to make a lasting impression. One year she discovered the merits of surgical tubing in the construction of sling shots. She would attach them to the main mast stays, and with deadly accuracy launch water balloons into open hatches of neighboring boats. Usually, she would wait for the occupants to be reportedly dressing for dinner ashore. One year she over-shot and hit several formally dressed diners at the Yacht Club, and when the police arrived my father rapidly heaved-to and made our usual retreat to the sanctuary of Coecles Harbor. Bordered on the south side by unoccupied territory, now the Mashomack Nature Conservancy, we always felt as though we were alone, safe, able to see trouble coming. Here we would regroup, venture to the deserted shore, feeling like Columbus seeking treasure, retelling pirate stories, and reflecting on another recent near capture.

By the way, after much inquiry, we find out what a Harelegger is. It is a person born on Shelter Island, and refers to how fast they could run for the ferry in their haste to return to their island sanctuary. As most people are now born in a hospital, there are certainly few Hareleggers left. Opinion varies, but less than 200, of this special group of freedom lovers remain.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

PORSCHE WHISPERER

One of the reasons the Hamptons is such a popular area is that it's very safe place to live. There "is" virtually no serious crime.

The most common crime committed is that of making a U-turn on a village main street. A move so bold and daring that it is viewed as a clear and present danger to the tranquillity of the Hamptons.

I've seen hardened criminals, disguised as blondes in Mercedes or Range Rovers, make illegal turns. The local constabulary pounces upon them faster than they can dial their cell phones.

The second most serious crime is that of speeding. You don't have to be a "Roads Scholar" to figure out that since the local police have done such a good job of preventing crime, what do they do to keep busy? They patrol the highways.

I've always felt that it was a rather bizarre fact that the highways of the Hamptons are patrolled by three police forces. Each village has a police force, then there's the Southampton Town police force. Both of these groups are backed up by the elite New York State Troopers. In Southampton and Easthampton Townships, the police are probably in possession of more radar guns than pistols. Do these automobile sharp shooters go to special radar gun target ranges?

So where does this leave all you drivers out there in your three hundred horsepower, 170mph Porsches? Or for that matter, what about the folks in their fifteen year old seventy horsepower Hondas that can certainly attain illegal speeds?

Don't speed. Just as the Hamptons have an abundance of golf courses with sand traps, there are miles of highways with speed traps.

If you want to drive fast legally, there are very few places left in the world to do so. There is no speed limit in Utah, which is great. However, nobody lives in Utah except Robert Redford. I've heard he drives a Porsche 911 at breakneck speeds all over the state. No one is there to see or hear him. The Porsche Whisperer.

Germany is famous for its Autobahn. To the car enthusiast who likes to drive fast, it is speed heaven, because as everyone knows, there's no speed limit on this highway. But be prepared for some serious driving. It is harder to get a driver's license in Germany than almost anywhere in the world, mainly because of the ability one needs to drive so fast. The German people, as a nation, are probably the world's best drivers.

Robert Redford's car

Several years ago I was cruising along the Autobahn in a capable car at 110mph in a heavy rain. Cars were constantly passing me, from Volkswagen GTIs to chauffeur-driven Mercedes diesel sedans. Standard driving practice in Germany.

They drive fast in Italy and France even though there are speed limits. However, the speed limits on the major highways are sometimes as high as 80mph. Let's face it, you're not going to tell any red blooded Italian, who drives his Vespa or Fiat like a Ferrari, to slow down.

I remember, not too many years ago, when sports cars were not so fast. The beautiful 1955 Austin Healy 100 was named the "100" because of its then impressive top speed.

The fastest car of that time, the sensuous Jaguar XK-120 produced 160 horsepower. It struggled to achieve its top speed of 124mph.

Today, even economy cars can usually be coaxed past 100mph. The world's leading exotic cars are now approaching the magic 200mph barrier.

Powerful sedans are faster than many of the sports cars built just ten years ago. The latest craze seems to be adding gobs of horsepower to sport utility vehicles. What kind of wacko needs a six thousand pound 150mph off-road monster? Those poor little piping plover chicks had better learn to fly really fast.

When I felt the need for speed, I used to go to the Bridgehampton race track and run my car. But alas, that picturesque, historic place is gone. The closest race track similar to the now defunct Bridgehampton is in Lime Rock, Connecticut. You can still go there on open track days and speed to your heart's rapid beat. But for me, Lime Rock is a "Bridge" too far.

There is a radical last resort for going fast in the Hamptons. It's a sky-diving school at Spadaro's Airport in Eastport (a few miles west of Westhampton). Even though I see no reason to jump out a perfectly good airplane, they will teach you how for a small fee. During free-fall, if you hold your arms tight to your sides, you can attain speeds of up to 120mph.

Finally, a truly legal way to go fast in the Hamptons.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears frequently on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at remsenburg@aol.com

SCENES FROM SPOKES MAN (OBSERVATIONS FROM A TEN SPEED)

MAIDSTONE SUNDAY

Change is good. I have a habit of totally emptying my pockets of it, keeping it all in jars, crockery and wide-necked bottles. Subsequently, when I move, which I did recently on Memorial Day (the largest moving weekend in America according to the folks at U-Haul, I am left with the task of hauling my "king's ransom" in nickels, dimes, pennies and thank-god-for-those quarters along with all my personal effects. Much like pumping the Franklin Mint, lifting and reloading this weight makes me want to bring in the Brinks.

For my morning bicycle ride I have decided to take handfuls of this change, fill a cargo pocket and pay for my breakfast with the loot. This is what I truly love about bicycle riding. The trips are always spontaneous, serendipitous, see what's on view at the moment, deal with solely what you've got on your back, on your bike or in your pockets.

As I start my ride down North Main Street in East Hampton, the Drakes Cake truck is making its delivery of yodels, devil dogs, etc. "We love the Drake" as Furthers own Jerry Seinfeld would say. They are moist, cheap and delicious; always a mainstay of a long bicycle tour. Turning onto Accabonac, the eastbound train comes soaring across the tressle with its new double-decker cars. I have fond memories of traveling from Long Island to the "Great City" with my mom for a day of seeing a museum, show, buying clothes for a special occasion and of course eating at Schraffts or the Automat. We'd ride the double-decker cars, sitting on top, but I'd want to climb up and down staring out at the unfolding scenery as we approached Manhattan.

We'd arrive at the old Pennsylvania Station, an exact reduced replica of the Roman Baths of Caracalia, and hit the streets at Seventh Avenue, walking up 34th Street toward Macy's and the Empire State Building. If the occasion we were shopping for was really special, a wedding, graduation or holiday event we'd head for Brooks Brothers. I being the youngest of three growing boys, my mother had deeply personal acquaintances with most of the salespeople at Brooks (she also has purchased there every necktie my father has ever worn). The high ceilings, brass chandeliers, warm mahogany paneling, worn oriental rugs, the smell of new shoe leather and the free samples of their own key lime men's cologne casued me to proclaim at age eleven, "Nothing could ever go wrong at Brooks Brothers." To me it was the fashion foundation upon which corporate and cultural Manhattan was built. And besides, it was a stones throw from the great hot dogs or Oyster Bar at Grand Central Station. When we rode the New York City subways, my mom had us play a game "Who do you trust". I had to look at every person seating or standing in the subway car, and select who I would turn to if there were an emergency. This taught me, as a youngster how to observe credibility, and be appropriately cautious in a large urban crowd.

Back to this particular July, Sunday, year 2000, my ride under the speeding train is a rush, and I turn on Egypt Lane, first depositing two paid bills at the Hook Mill Post boxes. Egypt Lane at six in the morning is so incredibly tranquil and orderly. It's beauty is solid, eternal with its hundred year old trees, now flowering giant rhododendrons, well-maintained New England-like cottages and its direct lead to the most amazing, mesmerizing expanse of Maidstone.

The Maidstone Country Club is truly an awesome sight always. It reminds me of F. Scott Fitzgerald's description of Gatsby stepping out onto the blue lawns of his New World on Manhasset Bay. It is more than just architecture and landscaping. It is history, tradition and substance. Maidstone is a definite destination node for a cyclist, far easier to ride by and around than withstand the rigors of board acceptance and green fees. Golf courses have always held notable fascination for me. I grew up in a town filled with them, and they were like interplanetary farms to me, dreamlike landscapes. Places to roam across at night, and cross country ski through at wintertime.

My brothers used to caddy and relay the inside scoop on local buisness men and intriguing social goings-on, on and off the links. It was only decades later that the effects of the considerably heavy pesticides became apparaent. The toll in cancer patients became extreme on Long Island. I personally lost my closest cousin Gordon, who grew up in a subdivision surrounded by two country clubs. Gordon died at age forty, ironically as an accomplished environmental activist. Why American golf courses cannot emulate their Scottish predecessors and maintain a more rustic, less pristine lay-out is beyond me?

Nevertheless, Maidstone is Maidstone, and it is like Camelot looming over the ocean and the village like an ancient castle, seen at a distance from an English countryside. Every once in a while there will be a stray golf ball on the side of the road, stamped Maidstone. I collect them for a Queens endodontist I know, who aspires to play the course.

One of the great happenings out here is the weekend yard sale. On this particular morning, I spot a promising one on Bluff Road. The garage was overflowing with a wide range of treasures that would definitely add some mood to my new digs. Whenever I am at a yard sale or a flea market perusing the "merch", the song "I'll be seeing you in all the old familiar places" always seems to pop into my mind. Objects and artifacts to me are souvenirs of history. I suppose this is why I dealt in architectural antiques for over fifteen years in my ever evolving working career.

I focused on Chinese thing at this Bluff Road second hand arena. The owners had been to Shanghai and Beijing. Evidently, there is a fantastic modern subway system carved through the ancient city of Shanghai. This was accomplished in relative short order without all the "red tape" one encounters in the politics of urban America. In China, it seems "you wanna dig a subway, you dig a subway". We also talked about the fantastic Peabody Museum in Salem, Massachusetts that highlights the dynamic trade that took place between our region, New England and China during the height of the whaling era. In China there are villages built exactly like New England towns, with "whaling captain" houses like you see in Sag Harbor.

At the yard sale, I picked up a great set of china dishware, service for eight, a Mongolian brass candlestick, a Rosenthal china ashtray from a French restaurant in Ithica, New York, four beautiful neckties at $1 each, a Steuben crystal bowl and a Ralph Lauren paisley duvet cover that had never been used. Quite a haul for this already hot Sunday morning.

Turning left on Miankomo into the cool tree-lined recently repaved lane, I sailed toward Main Street Amagansett, and my food destination of the moment, the Amagansett Farmer's Market. I am currently on a jag; inhaling garden tuna wraps with extra sprouts. This I sometimes combined with their fabulous grilled yellow peppers and thinly sliced black forest ham, a breakfast worthy of the twenty miles I put in my ambling about on this particular morning. Sitting on the front yard benches, watching the dogs pull at owners, the cheerful children and the mounting traffic, I am chatting up by Princeton People who eye my sweatshirt. This couple was on mountain bikes and rode from Sag Harbor, where their yacht, crew and cook were moored at the marina. We talked about mutually known New Jersey eccentrics, what exit we resided at off the New Jersey Turnpike, Philly cheese steaks, and I recommended that they eat at the outdoor dining patio of the American Veterans of Foreign Wars building overlooking the Sag Harbor waterfront on Bay Street. It is a delightful place to enjoy great and reasonably priced seafood. As my lunch partner exclaimed last weekend, "it beats anything in San Louis Opisbo."

Riding back down to Hedges, I see the Little Leaguers getting ready for major play, Amagansett Fire Department against Montauk, turn past the Ocean Dunes and head for a quick swim at Indian Wells Beach. Then its back down Further, a right at Cross, a left at Hither, right back onto Egypt, and a hop, skip to my pad off North Main. A shower, shave and I'm out for another day of hawking houses in the Real Estate Market of the Villages of East Hampton, New York, USA, Planet Earth.

The disc jockey on the radio says to expect a change in the weather. A warm spell's moving in with possible thunder storms late in the day. Against my distaste for umbrellas, I throw the one I got from the American Hotel in the back of my car. —Steve G. Corwin

Shop Til' You Drop ...With Maria Tennariello

The weather has been lovely and all though the beaches are crowded, so are the towns and villages buzzing with shoppers. Let's do a little shopping.

I have a hot tip right out of Jimmy's on Main Street in Westhampton Beach and The Circle in East Hampton. The scoop for the weekend of July 15 - 16 is Zang Toi's personal appearance in Westhampton Beach for the Fall Holiday Collection for custom clientele and John Galiano in East Hampton on Saturday and Sunday for the Fall/Winter 2000, Sneak Preview Resort 2000. This is the first time in the United States. It's Christmas in July with a wonderful selection of cashmere, leather, and shearlings in both locations. So, the Manhattanites don't have to wait until September to do their shopping in Bergdorf-Goodman and Madison Avenue, it's all here in the Hamptons.

Heading to Southampton, I stopped off at Rose Jewelers on Main Street for a schedule of their M&J Savitt Designer Jewelry Show. Well, it's on for this weekend, July 15, and 16. Don't miss this one. I will keep you posted on upcoming events here at Rose Jewelers.

On West Main Street at Ashley & Co. you will find energizing Shiatsu Massage and facials that leave you feeling young and glowing. Call 283-3340.

Want to drive the car of your dreams for your weekend in the Hamptons? The much needed luxury and exotic car rental company has opened its doors, offering a wide selection of European and American sports cars that are available for daily, weekly and monthly rentals this summer. Picture yourself driving a Bentley, Porsche, Mercedes, Panoz and Hummer just to name a few. All this and more at Unique Auto Rentals of Southampton. Unique is used to catering to everyone from the vacationing couple, to the hottest music artists, to European diplomats at their locations that include Fort Lauderdale and Miami and now Southampton with an upcoming Atlanta location. Visit www.UniqueAutoRentals.com for complete information.

At Macs & More on Montauk Highway in Watermill they are offering an AppleCare Service Contract that extends your warranty of an additional two years of bumper-to-bumper on all parts and labor for an additional $149, this being the best value for your money and your iMac. Call Macs & More for information at 726-7272.

The Elegant John at the Red Horse Market on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, is having a heck of a sale on china lamps. All their china lamps that regularly sold from $124.99 to $329.99 are now reduced to $99. to $219.99. You will find great sofas and chairs that are made by a fine upholsterer from the D&D Building in New York City, which Elegant John is now selling at 40% off their regular prices.

Ah...Mark, Fore & Strike, nicely located on Main Street in East Hampton, has plenty of pretty, feminine and versatile sundresses which are a must for the warm summer ahead, priced nicely at $59. There is always something good going on here.

Hot off the press; for fun and bargains don't miss the Antiques Auction on site, entire contents sale on Saturday, July 15, at 12 noon. Located at 251 Montauk Highway in East Hampton, (next to Snowflake) Faces Antiques has been sold and their wonderful merchan-

Diamonds Are A Girls Best Friend

Ask any gal who her best friend is. I'll bet she will say "diamonds." Some might say their husband, some might say their pet, but most will say that diamond jewelry are a girls best friend.

Alberto and Stefania Sabbadini, the renowned jewelers from Milan, Italy will be unveiling their latest collection next week when they arrive for their annual visit to Southampton.

The Sabbadini Jewelry Company, a family business for several generations, is run by Alberto Sabbadini, a widely respected connoisseur of diamonds and gemstones. He is the one who creates the classically elegant designs and the pieces are then crafted by skilled goldsmiths who have worked for decades at the company's factory in Milan.

Sabbadini says the company's trademark is its "invisibly set" bees, which he created in 1986. Using rubies, sapphires and yellow sapphires, the invisible setting collection includes the much-in-demand bee brooch, which is the size and likeness of a large bee and encrusted with diamonds and precious stones, the flexible diamond ring, and a large selection of necklaces, bracelets, pins, earrings, rings and pendants with carved crystal. The top quality colored stones and diamonds of various cuts and shapes are combined into one-of-a-kind pieces as well as a variety of other pieces produced in limited quantities.

Sabbadini says he designs his jewelry to reflect and match the latest high fashion trends so the jewelry goes perfectly with a woman's clothes. He says his highest compliment is that "women find my jewelry flattering and I like to make women look their best."

Sabbadini's collection will be on display at Southampton's Club Colette, 136 Main Street, from Friday, July 28 through Monday, July 31, from 12 noon until 9 p.m. so mark your calendars for this fabulous event. I'll see you there! - Maria Tennariello

Protect Your Eyes From The Summer Rays

Now that summer is here and in full swing, many of us Hamptonites are no doubt building our summer wardrobes with this year's must-haves. As you know, critical to any summer outfit is the perfect pair of sunglasses. But many of us are guilty of choosing sunglasses based solely on style, without regard for the kind of protection the lenses offer.

This year there is now more concern than ever before about the dangers of sunlight and the harmful effects it can have on the eye.

HEV radiation, a form of sunlight that most people are not aware of, may be just as damaging as UV rays, if not more so. HEV light, which for years has been discussed in the medical and scientific communities, can cause premature aging of the eye and the skin around it and potentially blindness, even with 100 percent UV protection.

Fortunately, there is now a way to protect against this type of radiation which, as many fashionable Hamptonites will be happy to know, ensures keeping up with the latest trends.

The new line of Code-Melanin-XP sunglasses, which has been designed specifically to protect against high-energy (HEV) light, as well as UV rays, provides Code Sunglasses sold at The Sunglass Hut/Bridgehampton and Amagansett Square maximum protection from the sun while offering a wide range of popular styles. The Code lenses are made using a patented technology that infuses the lenses with melanin, nature's most light-absorbing pigment that naturally protects the body from damaging rays.

Wearing Code Melanin-XP sunglasses makes colors pop and images clearer and crisper than ever before. With Code, your view of the world is enhanced and finely tuned, just as the sounds of music are enhanced when played on a top-performing stereo system. It has to be experienced to be believed.

They are available in a wide range of high-style/high-function metal and combination metal/plastic frames of the highest quality standards. Select silver, gunmetal or tortoise shell frames – three of today's hottest sunglass finishes, as well as black, copper and gold. Spring-hinge technology allows for the most comfortable fit possible.

The Code line, which starts at $69.99, is available at two Sunglass Hut stores in the Hamptons, Sunglass Hut at Bridgehampton Commons on Montauk Highway and Snake Hollow Road and the Snuggles Hut at Amagansett Square Outlet, 146 Main Street in Amagansett. – Maria Tennariello

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

HAZEL, KUSHNER, LAU, RIZZI AT LIZAN TOPS

While one may approach the current exhibit at Lizan Tops Gallery from any number of angles, the importance of line appears most appropriate and relevant. Its most obvious use is conveyed in Dan Rizzi's work which shows his expertise with illustration techniques. What's particularly appealing is the way Mr. Rizzi uses his naive-looking flower images where their execution resembles similarly old-fashioned embroidery devices. (This critic is somehow reminded of Judy Chicago's recent show at the American Museum of Crafts in New York.) Even so, there's a classic touch with Mr. Rizzi's calligraphy-inspired textual pieces where line again is significant.

Rex Lau also employs line, this time in his leaf motifs — but for a different purpose. Here there's a more philosophical reason for the lines, at least in this critic's view. Seemingly less autobiographical than his last exhibit at Lizan Tops, there's more here than initially meets the eye. For example, with "Leaves Floating in Water, #13," the leaves/lines get lighter in color as they move farther away from the painting's center; the leaves don't seem to overlap as much either. "Lines" become connections that don't seem to coalesce as they recede from home base (center). Is this imagery to be interpreted as Mr. Lau's personal statement or is it only a matter of design?

Robert Kushner's use of lines is definitely a matter of design and an arresting one at that. His lines, while not as precise as Mr. Rizzi's or Mr. Lau's, lead us through a maze of color helping to explicate his aesthetics. Richard Hazel's Spanish cedar sculptures depend on line as well, each piece constructed of slat-like configurations which are defined by horizontal rows. The shapes themselves are some of the most unique we've seen.

DONALD BAECHLER AT GLENN HOROWITZ BOOKSELLER

Line is also a salient aspect in the work of Donald Baechler where drawing, per se, accounts for the artist's aesthetic thrust. While his flower images may be obviously compared to those of Don Rizzi's in subject and technique, there are also obvious differences.

These differences are also delightful surprises. Perhaps playing homage to his previous cartoon-like figures, faces appear in some of the blossoms; some flowers seem real, while other shapes are manufactured. Many look as if they are about to take flight.

A particular painting, "Murals of Lake Geneva," holds much interest. It doesn't appear to have anything to do with the Lake itself, but resembles two figures (men?) standing by a street lamp, enjoying a good joke or story. It's not very difficult, therefore, to imagine that the figures may break out into song and dance at any minute, like the sailors in the film, On the Town. With this one instance, we can project the narrative possibilities of Mr. Baechler's work.

The show at East Hampton's Lizan Tops Gallery will be on view until July 25; Donald Baechler's exhibit will be at East Hampton's Glenn Horowitz Bookseller until July 19.

Floating on Water by Rex Lau

in appreciation: ronald stein

Artist Ronald Stein's recent death brings both sadness and reflection — and an appreciation of his work, regardless of the fact that he was Jackson Pollock and Lee Krasner's nephew.

Although Mr. Stein was a very special and complex image-maker, his spoken/written communication was often equally important. Ironically, while one could not always take him literally "at his word," the quotes he used when describing his world view and art were telling and true.

For example, Mr. Stein wrote an e.e. Cummings' quote on one photograph to explain his painting: "To be nobody- but myself- in a world which is doing its best to make you like everybody else.. (You must) fight the hardest battle which any human being can fight, and never stop fighting."

Mr. Stein took these words to heart — in life and in art. One painting done during the last 10 years shows two boxers attached like Siamese twins, perhaps a metaphor for his struggling spirit, perhaps also reinforcing Mr. Stein's recurring "doubleganger" theme. (Many paintings represented this concept of the real and the apparitional— what was true and what was believed or imagined to be true.)

Mr. Stein employed another quote (this time from himself) when being interviewed in a 1965 issue of Glamour Magazine which also gives significance to his life/art. The passage deals with the nature of "reality" as well: "The search for reality has always interested me deeply. What I mean by reality is the atmosphere in which men interact with each other. I try to make images to express the atmosphere, Natural phenomena affects man profoundly..."

Once more, Mr. Stein's paintings often reflect this quote when relating reality and man's interaction. Although more than three decades have passed since the 1965 passage above and his recent work, one particular piece ("Unwelcomed Guest") shows this interaction most succinctly, where a group of individuals are paying homage to a seated figure, obviously a leader.

There's a Postmodern inference here, a narrative thrust unfolding at a pivotal point in people's lives. One can also imagine a political message at work as well, although Mr. Stein was not overtly political in his art. Scratch that. Everything was fodder for Mr. Stein's art in his search for what was real and true.

Spiritual matters were especially "food for thought." Consider his "Madonna and Child," where the infant Jesus is represented by a monkey. But not all of Mr. Stein's religious themes are irreverent. A portrait print series he made while obtaining a Masters Degree at Rutgers University in the 1970s is as pious and respectful as any "religious art": a Jesus-like figure which is continually shifting its points-of-view.

Through the years, Mr. Stein's entire oeuvre reflects such a shifting of viewpoints as well: from diverse perspectives concerning "truth"/reality to reverence / irreverence.

However, these dislocations are not unsubstantial in the least bit.. Mr. Stein was always taking risks, looking for meaning, never backing off. His art will always remind us of this— and perhaps motivate us to "fight the hardest battle... and never stop fighting."

Sotheby's Antique Road Show/Reception

There is an old adage that goes "one man's trash is another man's treasure". Maybe this is the explanation for our fascination with yard sales and flea markets and the popularity of such shows as the Antique Road Show. We can't help but wonder if that old painting in Grandma's attic wasn't painted by one of the old masters, that tiny table that needs refinishing isn't an original Hitchcock or that rather ornate stained glass lamp collecting dust in some closet might not just be an original Tiffany lamp. And the incredible really does happen according to Frank Newbold, Senior Vice President, Brokerage Manager of Sotheby's International Realty in East Hampton. One of the original twelve copies of the Declaration of Independence was recently auctioned at Sothebys.com for a record $ 8 million. The Declaration of Independence, which was purchased by Norman Lear (All in the Family), was found on the back of another picture which was purchased at a yard sale for $4.

Maybe it was the lure of easy money or merely idle curiosity that prompted about one third of the 100 smartly dressed men and women who attended Sotheby's hybrid version of the antique roadshow to bring items to be appraised. Originally conceived by Mr. Newbold as a thank you to clients and friends, the organizers were surprised at the interest generated by the reception and the number of people who participated in the appraisal. Guests gathered in a tented area, amid rolling hills and the spacious greens of Applewild Farms in Bridgehampton. The setting was perfect providing the club-like ambiance that the organizers were hoping to create. While some of the guests were having items appraised, the remainder were enjoying cocktails from the open bars that peppered the tented area and nibbling on the original and varied selection of hors d'oeuvres as a cool breeze wafted the sounds of cool jazz through the night air.

This backdrop provided the perfect setting for the many stories that accompanied the appraised items: Theodora and Ross Velys received a painting from a beloved friend and had no idea of its value before bringing it to the event to be appraised. They were delighted to learn that it was a copy of an 18th century original museum piece and was valued at $3,000-$4,000.

Bob Marrs found out that he owned an original John Elliott which he had purchased at auction for $200 and was valued at $1,500-$2,000.

Another couple (name withheld) brought a Windsor chair dating from 1744 which had been in the family for generations. Despite its evaluation at over $5,000, these local residents vow not to sell it but to make it a part of their children's inheritance.

Debbie and Ted Quimley of Bridgehampton brought a set of Lenox plates etched with a rendition of Columbia University circa 1932 to be appraised. It seems that a friend of theirs, who had recently gotten married, had long coveted the plates, but before giving them to him as a wedding present, they decided to have them appraised. At over $50 a plate (they have eleven of them), I think that they will be looking for another gift for the bridegroom.

Frank and Lynn Rice of Southampton brought a picture of her father's polo pony which was painted in 1924 by a noted painter. This particular pony was famous for having taken part in the 1924 Olympics in Paris and the picture was valued at between $4,000-$6,000.

An elderly, severely dressed woman approached Ben Doller, Sr. Vice-President, Worldwide Director and asked him if he appraised jewelry. When he answered in the affirmative, she dramatically ripped open her blouse to reveal an exceptionally large, exception diamond.

At the conclusion of the evening, guests were encouraged to stroll over the grounds stopping at the stables to feed the horses the carrots that were provided for that purpose.

This successful event will be repeated next year however, the venue will undoubtedly vary. Applewild Farms, represented by Sotheby's International Realty, encompasses fifteen meticulously groomed acres including a full-service commercial equestrian facility, a classic farmhouse and an additional one acre building lot. If you are interested in the property, the asking price is just under $5 million. You never know, perhaps your next yard sale "treasure" will fund the purchase!

By the way, I too brought along a family "heirloom" to be appraised. It's value—well, suffice it to say that I'll be writing for Dan's Papers for some years to come.

DRAMAMINE DRAMA

The Perfect Storm may not be perfect, but, it's good enough to churn up your emotions, shiver your timbers and perhaps make you think twice about going into the water . . . just when you thought it was safe . . . again! Labeled, in the movie, itself, as a "monster", the Storm does have some teeth, though not as sharp or, as piercing as Jaws' or, as deep as Moby Dick or, as purely daunting as The Old Man and the Sea. This particular "Man-against-the-terrors-of-the-deep" makes its villain the weather and that is probably the film's worst flaw, since the TV graphics, used in the movie to "explain" the storm's monstrosity, is everyday - boring. Whereas, on the big screen, the visual, overwhelming combatant of the salty, crusty crew of six Gloucester fishermen in their rusty little boat, is their age old adversary . . . the sea . . . whipped into a fury by the 1991 convergence of three meteorological forces off the northeast coast. Though touted by a TV weatherman and his electronic maps and radar, the storm never takes on a personality . . . let alone a mythic identity, which could have given the film tragic proportions. And, computer generated effects do well with clouds, rain and blowing jetsam but it is the mammoth sea and its massive memory-chord striking imagery that terrorizes. Picture one lost soul, bobbing like a cork, on the huge expanse of the rolling ocean . . . this is the film's defining moment.

HURRICANE GRACE (OF GOD)

The best-selling book by Sebastian Junger (which I avoided because my son owns and operated four fishing "industrial sites" as he calls them, out of Victoria, British Columbia), was adapted by Bill Wittliff with good, terse dialogue and a good shuffling of its three elements which are: 1) The crew of the Andrea Gail out, in a last desperate effort, to harvest a big catch of swordfish way off the Grand Banks. 2) The women, families and "locals" who wait and watch and 3) The survival battles at sea, by far the largest portion, to insure its Action Summer Movie saleability . . . the specialty of Director Wolfgang Peterson (who gave Air Force One Das Boot in the rump). One of the insurance premiums, or liabilities, is the inclusion of a small sailing sloop, and its refined crew of three, also foundering in deep, deep trouble and water. This gives Herr Kommandant Peterson the charge to bring in "Air Force Two" . . . the Coast Guard Air Rescue helicopters and refueling plane (God Bless, them) but here a Con Air-con job detour from the trials of the Andrea Gail's crew, a likable bunch of losers.

SINCE MY GAL AND I AIN'T TOGETHER

This stormy weather movie opens like a Rodgers and Hammerstein musical ("We had a real fine clambake"). The sun shines gaily as the locals (happy as clams . . . before the bake) pour out of the bar on to the docks to greet the returning fishing boats but, gloom creeps in as Captain Billy is troubled (he has dark circles around his eyes and stubble) as he and his crew hear the bad news about another skimpy catch . . . Billy continues his long losing streak . . . he longs for his ex-wife and children and a full hold of swordfish. George Clooney, as Capt. Billy broods well but, unlike the other troubled Captain, Ahab, Billy doesn't verbalize much, so, he is stoically enigmatic. He does wax poetic, once or twice, about the joy of captaining . . . actually it's once and it is so nice, it's repeated. However, the crew is something else again. They are colorful, compelling, lovable and well acted! Mark Wahlberg, as the young lover, Bobby and John C. Reilly, the burly, boiling, Murph . . . William

The Perfect Storm

Fichtner as the comical professional loser, Sully, are exceptional and ALL are a fine, working-class ensemble. Please note: Sully's new found love interest . . . as far as I'm concerned they are the Lovers of the Year! heartbreakingly lovely and so touching. Diane Lane as Bobby's tenacious lover is effective, too. Captain Billy has someone who longs for him, too. For up-to-date movie equality, she is a more successful boat Captain than he is. But, he hugs-chugs around her. . . and out to bring back the biggest haul ever!

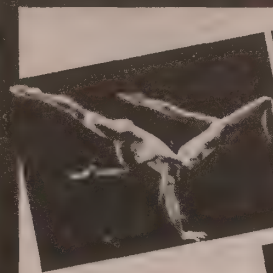

THAT SINKING FEELING

Don't expect to be Titanic-ally swamped though, there are some minor overlapping similarities to the oversized tragedy but, Perfect Storm is an entirely different kettle of fish. Titanic's stories of gigantic tragedy take place on the always possibly dangerous behemoth . . . the ocean . . . that's simply sleeping soundly. This is the story of guys foolishly challenging the rudely awakened and angry magnificence for a little bit of success and self esteem. Silly? Maybe.

Having lost friends in boating mishaps, I was heavily moved by even the endangered crew of the small sloop so, I cannot know if you too can find real drama in this movie that has been twisted to make a Twister kind of ill-wind-that-blows-no-good gimmick by the machines that give us disasters by numbers.

Kayaking Through The Web

By Rachel Sokol

There are various Paddling schools across North America for both kayaking and canoeing in flatwater and whitewater. If you are giving kayaking a chance this summer, let the dot.com world help prepare you for your outing, and please don't forget the importance of a life-preserver.

Check out these informative kayak sites before you get all wet and set sail. An informative search site for Kayaking is www.paddling.net. Almost like a cyber-magazine with the works, paddling.net provides a directory of U.S. paddling schools, kayak tips from weekly columnists, kayak and canoe advice and a buyer's guide to purchase kayaks and equipment. The site also provides a feedback forum where readers submit a product review for a kayak or canoe manufacturer. Under the site's classified ad's link are ads selling used canoes, kayaks, and equipment. Specific searches can be done by state, wanted, or for sale. Ads for necessary equipment can be posted for free through the site under their "Associations link." There is also a listing of accredited national and international paddling associations, with links to their sites, which provide legal and general information about paddling. Locate by country, state or province. Look for canoeing and kayaking guides, outfitters and rental facilities under the Outfitting link. Once a preference of location is selected, a list of guides, rental, plus other places to take your canoe or kayak, will be provided for that state or area-with links to the company or store's sites. Canoe & Kayak magazine on-line (www.canoekayak.com) is a good source of information for travel tips and featured articles on paddling. The site provides a search through past issues, as well as a topic search for more generalized kayak information.

A new products information section rates and introduces new paddlesport equipment suitable for canoeing and kayaking. The site also has a bulletin board of reader postings, for greater communication among kayak enthusiasts.

If your interested in kayaking closer to home, say, in the Hamptons, visit the site for The East Coast Adventure Tour Company Inc. (www.startkayaking.com) based in Sag Harbor, NY. East Coast Adventures offers the most diverse selection of kayak eco-tours, specialty tours, sales and rentals on the East End. As their site states, their kayak outings are designed for individuals and families with or without kayaking experience who would like a safe, outdoor adventure. ECTAC provides tours great for children (age four and up) such as the Captain Kidd Treasure Hunt Tour, which is a shallow-water pirate hunt where children are encouraged to dress up as pirates for the adventure. Kayak instructors from the ECTAC are certified by the State Of New York, The American Canoe Association and the American Red Cross. All brands of Kayaks and equipment can be rented from their store at 3253 Noyak Road in Sag Harbor with a free local kayak-delivery service.

Most of the kayak websites provide links to company's on-line stores to read-up on the latest kayak equipment and brands for rent or purchase. Of course, before you engage in any first-time kayaking, be sure to ask guides for specific water-safety instructions. And be sure to kayak or canoe in appropriate weather and allow yourself time to prepare for weather-safety procedures in case of emergency.

Let the web provide you with the water adventure that's best for you, and choose whatever products and locations float your boat.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

When the weather is sultry, I think you will agree that sweet or savory cold soups are an icy bowl of instant revival. Soup in its many variations can easily move through a menu from appetizer to dessert.

The ubiquitous gazpacho takes an unusual turn when ripe tomatoes are teamed with sweet melon for a simple and refreshing starter. Chilled spinach soup flavored with egg and lemon is reminiscent of the classic, avgolemono, Greece's rice-based lemony chicken soup. A garnish of hard-boiled eggs and crunchy cucumber makes the soup a satisfying light lunch. Fruit soup blends have become popular in recent years. A cool and easy way to end a meal is to macerate fruits in a flavored sugar syrup for several hours or overnight, then puree in a blender or food processor. The combination of pineapple and mango offers a delicious and refreshing ending to a summer menu.

Remember that chilled foods require more seasoning than warm foods. So let your taste buds be your guide and adjust seasonings as necessary.

COLD TOMATO SOUP WITH MELON GARNISH

The combination of tomato, a fruit used as a vegetable, is less surprising than it seems when teamed with sweet melon.

Serves 4-6

2 pounds ripe tomatoes
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 large shallot, finely chopped
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 small ripe cantaloupe
2 tablespoons finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
2 tablespoons shredded fresh mint leaves

1/2 cup crème fraîche or sour cream
2 tablespoons flat-leaf Italian parsley, finely chopped
2 tablespoons shredded fresh mint leaves

1. Submerge tomatoes in a pot of boiling water for 30-40 seconds to facilitate peeling. Remove with slotted spoon and when cool enough to handle, peel the tomatoes. Chop coarsely then put through a food mill to puree. You should have about 3 cups of puree.

2. Heat oil in a non-stick skillet and saute the shallot for about 1 minute, until tender, being careful not to brown. Add the tomatoes, salt and pepper to taste and the lemon juice. Stir to mix, remove from heat and cool. Chop coarsely and set aside.

3. Peel the cucumber and slice lengthwise. Scoop out the seeds with a teaspoon and discard. Cut into thick slices, sprinkle with salt and allow to drain in a colander for about 20 minutes. Drain, rinse and pat dry. Put the cucumbers and tomatoes through a food mill or in workbowl of food processor and process to a coarse puree. You should have about 4 cups. Add the crème fraîche or sour cream and stir to mix. Refrigerate for several hours or overnight.

4. When ready to serve, scoop out the melon with a melon baller or cut into small dice. Serve the cold soup with an equal amount of melon garnish sprinkled with parsley and mint.

CHILLED SPINACH LEMON SOUP

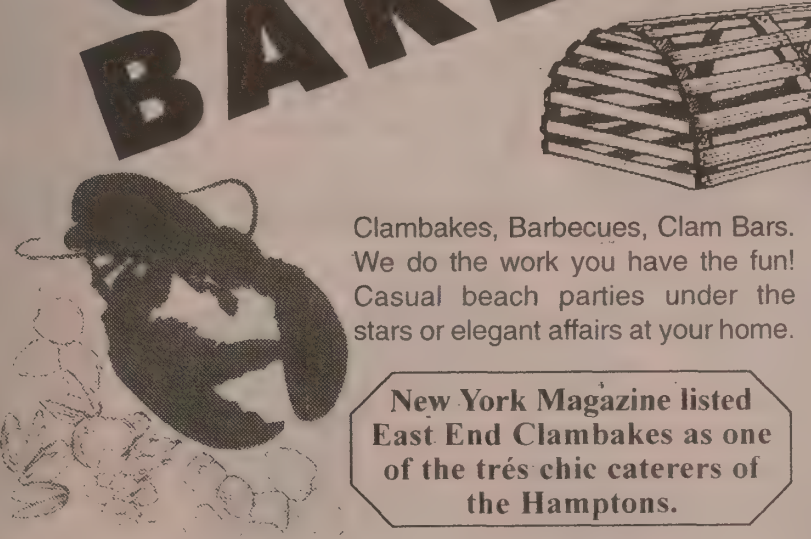

Flavored with lemon and eggs, this cold soup is reminiscent of Greece's Classic avgolemono.
Serves 4-6

1 medium onion, diced
4 cups chicken stock
1 pound fresh spinach, heavy stems removed
1-2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

2 eggs
3-4 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup light cream
2 hard-boiled eggs, sieved or chopped
1/2 cucumber, peeled, seeded and diced

1. Put onion and chicken stock in a soup pot and bring to a boil. Simmer briskly for 10 minutes until onion is tender.

2. Meanwhile, wash spinach leaves in several changes of lukewarm water until all sand is removed. Stack and shred leaves and add to the broth with the onions. Simmer 4-5 minutes longer and season with salt and pepper to taste. Add the dill and remove from heat.

3. In a small bowl, whisk the eggs with the lemon juice. Add a little hot broth, stirring constantly so the eggs do not curdle or cook. Slowly return this mixture to the pot, whisking vigorously to blend. Pour the soup into a large bowl to cool. When it reaches room temperature, add the cream and stir to mix. Cover and chill for several hours or overnight.

4. When ready to serve, taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and divide into soup bowls. Top with egg and cucumber garnish, or pass garnish in separate bowls at the table.

PINEAPPLE MANGO FRUIT SOUP

Be sure to prepare up to two days ahead for flavors to meld. Serve this sweet summer blend with fruit sorbet of your choice.

Serves 6

3 cups water
1 cup sugar
1 lemon, zested and juiced
1 vanilla bean, split and scraped
1 inch knob of ginger, peeled
1 pineapple, cut into small dice
3 mangos, cut into small dice
Fruit sorbet accompaniment, if desired
Mint leaves for garnish

1. Place the water, sugar, lemon zest and juice, scraped vanilla bean and ginger in a saucepan. Bring ingredients to a boil, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Let simmer for 15 minutes until the liquid is slightly syrupy.

2. Meanwhile prepare the fruit. Place half of the cut up fruit in the sugar syrup and simmer for 8-10 minutes longer. Let cool. Transfer to a suitable container, cover and refrigerate for up to two days to macerate in the sugar syrup. Place remaining fruit in a separate bowl, cover and refrigerate.

3. Several hours before serving, put the mixture in a blender or food processor and puree; return to refrigerator to chill. Serve the cold soup with the fruit and mint leaf garnish, and a scoop of sorbet, if desired.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

As I walked down the stairs of this restaurant, I was lured by the sounds of the reggae music. The sun was pouring into this little oasis and I felt as though I was transported to some tropical Caribbean island. The people standing at the bar were all suntan and they were sipping frozen daiquiris and margaritas listening to the sounds of this wonderful reggae band. The live entertainment is performed Thursday through Sunday on the outdoor deck. The owner James Carroll greeted me and I immediately felt at home. His charismatic smile and friendly charm was very comforting. He immediately asked me to have a drink and I accepted of course having a perfectly blended pina colada with a Meyers float made by Kristina Fillebrown the very pretty blonde bartender who surely knows how to make a cocktail. James said, "that they are here for the first season and that he plans

White Water Grill
7 North Highway, Hampton Bays

to make a very big impression," he wants to provide an upscale menu and still maintain the relaxed waterfront dining that this setting has to offer. So far it was working. I sat on the outside deck under a white market teak umbrella shading us just enough but also giving us enough sunshine and had the best view of the boats passing through the canal. The sun was setting, and people watching was at its best as they slowly came down the stairs onto the deck with smiles on their faces knowing that they had just landed on the perfect spot and were in for a great time. There is a brand new dock for twenty boats where people can come by for lunch or dinner as well. All the interesting boats entertained me as they made their entrances. We felt as though it was a boat parade. I was then introduced to the executive chef Kenneth Pulomena, he was very happy to share his 35 years of cooking experience with me which included The Blue Water Grill in New York, Docks, as well as cooking on the Island of St. Marten at the five star restaurant Rainbow. Seafood and Italian eclectic is his style, he likes to keep his dishes simple focusing on the flavors and using the freshest fish available. I was amused by his sense of humor, "whatever my customers would like, if they want me to kick it up a notch in flavor I will, I aim to please, the buzz is out we are here to stay so come on down and check out our new attitude," and he smiled and told me that I was going to enjoy some of his favorite house specialties. I got the impression that this guy knew what he was doing and his character reminded me of Emeril Lagasse whom we all know as the famous New Orleans chef that can make anyone hungry and have good time after watching him on his cooking show. After speaking with Kenneth I could not wait to get started. My guests and I were introduced to Rennee Wisniki, our waitress and she recited the evening specials and she spoke with such knowledge of each dish that I could visualize each one as she finished. Blackened catfish over a bed of sweet potato and crabmeat hash with a voodoo sauce, sounded wonderful and was told that it was a secret recipe of the chef and that we would very pleased, Angel hair pasta with rock shrimp and arugula, sautéed soft shell crab, one, two, or three pound lobsters steamed or broiled, these were the additions to the already perfect menu. There is something on this menu for everyone, seafood, steaks, chicken, and from the Shell Bar one can get lost in a plate of raw shellfish. Items like oysters, shrimp cocktail, lobster cocktail, little neck clams, just to name a few are served on a two tier ice platter that you can pick and dip to your hearts content. We had this and were amazed at the perfect size of the oysters, the sweetness of the clams, and the beautiful presentation of the lobster and shrimp that are fanned out on the top tier and tasted as good as they looked. We had a glass of the Domaine St. George Chardonnay '99 that was crisp and complemented the shellfish. The wine list offers many varieties of Chardonnays from California, Italian Pinot Grigio, and a Long Island Sauvignon Blanc. We could not stop thinking what a wonderful spot this was and how similar it was to being on Caribbean Island the sound of the music and the boats was idyllic. The next course was introduced and it was the house special Cioppino, very similar to a bouillabaisse, we all loved this one it was a wonderful blend of shellfish in a tomato broth with fresh herbs and it was light and full of flavor a little spicy but you could still taste the distinct flavors of the of the fish. We had a glass of the Giovelli Pinot Grigio that was clean and crisp and opened up our palettes to enhance the dish. Renee came back to see if everything was all right and we could see that she was not surprised when we all had smiles on our faces. "I love working here, the owner James makes sure that everyone is happy and that makes my job a pleasure. We are one big happy family," she said. It was evident to us that the staff all felt that way because everyone was busy working and keeping the place well organized as the growing crowd patiently waited for a table. We then tried the steak and it was cooked exactly as we had asked, medium rare, perfectly aged and tender accompanied by the house fries, which were crunchy on the outside, and tender on the inside; we were in heaven. We had a wonderful glass of Mondavi Cabernet Sauvignon, which furthered the pleasure of our dining experience making it a very elegant one indeed. In addition to this extraordinary dinner menu the White Water Grill also serves lunch daily from 12-4pm with a sandwich board that includes a Lobster Roll sandwich, a shellfish wrap, a classic White Water Grill burger, soups, and salads. Last but definitely not least we were handed the dessert menu and we were very happy to indulge in these fine sweet wonders. There was a chocolate seduction that got our attention, a flourless dense chocolate cake that was served with fresh whipped cream and strawberries. There was also a warm Apple Brown Betty which was a favorite of mine served with a side of homemade vanilla caramel ice cream. White Water Grill is open from 5 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. on weekdays and until 11p.m. on weekends. The restaurant is available for private parties and catering. Do not miss this amazing waterfront dining experience.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

When I first commenced my career at Long Island Farm Bureau twelve years ago, the summer months were a time to catch up and digest all that transpired during the legislative session in Albany. That was a big adjustment for me, to have some time to enjoy the summer. As a farmer, you are so busy from sun up to sun down, and even working at night to keep up with irrigation, planting, and harvesting, that the summer goes by in a blur. If you were able to have a family barbecue or attend one or two in the community, you were lucky. When we were in our teenage years and still in high school, Dad would let us escape now and then to hit the beach, go to a ball game, or do whatever we wanted. Once I finished school, however, there were few "play" opportunities on the farm. I never got to the ocean or yacht club or golf course, like many of my non-farm buddies. So, when I changed careers to work at my current position, I felt guilty not working all the time as I did on the farm and even felt guilty when I had some slow days at the office. I had never experienced summer weather to enjoy it!

Since that time, I've enjoyed all the things I've missed out on. Believe it or not, some things change over time. The legislature doesn't always finish by the 4th of July and we can be dealing with many state issues right through the summer. Every year seems to get busier, including the summer months. Local issues, such as land preservation, zoning, pesticides, farmstand problems, the new farm market authority, soil and water conservation, Cornell meetings and on and on - these don't pay attention to the calendar. It is the week after the 4th of July and my personal calendar is pretty much filled up to mid-December. You can bet I do have a few golf outings scheduled, but not as many as in prior years. Just too much going on.

A lot of exciting events are coming up soon. This Friday, we will be taking Democratic senatorial candidate and First Lady Hillary Clinton on a tour of the North Fork. She will be visiting the Ivy Acres greenhouse operation, followed by the Cornell University Horticultural Research and Extension Center in Riverhead. This will be an opportunity to exchange dialogue with Mrs. Clinton on farm policy issues, such as labor, environ-

Lazio sometime in the next several months as well (LIFB is non-partisan, so we will accommodate both major party candidates when possible).

Next week, we are hosting the NY State Agricultural Society summer meeting and tour. Riverhead Town historian Justine Wells and hubby Ken are going to talk to the group about our agricultural heritage at Paumanok Vineyard during a dinner prepared by our good friend, John Ross of Ross' North Fork Restaurant (I can't wait for that lobster stew!). Then, over the weekend, we will take our friends from upstate out to Cliff & Lee Foster's potato farm, John Halsey's family farm in Mecox, and Wolfer Estates Stable and Vineyard. The Ag Society is the oldest agricultural organization in the state. They were the creators of the New York State Fair in Syracuse and are co-sponsors of the Empire State Leadership Institute, better known as LEAD NY. I am a board member of each. As you can tell, there is no such thing as "quiet time" anymore.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

THE KEY TO GROWING ORGANIC SWEET PEPPERS

Taking good care of your pepper plants is half of the ripeness equation. Don't heed the common myth that you can get ripe fruits sooner by withholding water or otherwise stressing your pepper plants. The truth is that stressed plants won't bear nearly as many peppers as well tended ones will and the peppers you do get won't be as large or thick-walled as they could have been.

The key to good pepper care is keeping the plants well fed. Just how much you'll need to feed them depends on your specific soil conditions. Have your soil tested. Don't guess. Peppers need the three basic food group of gardening: Nitrogen to grow big and sturdy plants with lots of leaves, Phosphorus for flowers and fruits, and potassium for strong roots.

Nitrogen (N), peppers definitely need some, but if you give them too much your plants will make leaves instead of fruit; you will delay the peppers from ripening to their final, fruitful color; the fruit that you do get will be watery, have less sugar and be more susceptible to rotting after being harvested. But don't be scared. Here's how to give nitrogen to your peppers wisely: Put at least half of all the nitrogen that you feed a pepper right into the soil at planting time. Give the plant the other half of its nitrogen when it sets its first batch of fruit.

Nitrogen washes out of the soil easily, which is the reason for that second application. The first hit of nitrogen will get your pepper plant off to a good strong start and the second application ensures that enough leaves will form to protect those precious baby bells from a bad case of sunburn.

Phosphorus is a vital, fruit producing nutrient which is highly insoluble in the soil, meaning that it doesn't leach very much. So just work it into the hole at planting time, putting it right where those pepper roots will be able to get it. Feeding your peppers most of their phosphorus (P) right at the beginning helps them flower and set fruit earlier.

Potassium (K), unlike phosphorus, this nutrient leaches easily from the soil, so be sure your peppers get some at planting time and then some more when you make that second feeding of nitrogen, once the first fruits have appeared.

If your soil is in good shape already, providing this organic fertilization is pretty easy. Composted manure, for instance, is an excellent way to get your peppers off to a good start. What kind of composted manure should you feed your peppers?

That depends on what's available. We spread about an eight inch layer of composted rabbit manure on our pepper planting area and till it in. If your soil is really poor, you may want to temporarily turn to one of the many blended organic fertilizers on the market while you build that soil up.

All fertilizers are marked with three numbers that represent, in order, nitrogen (N), phosphorus (P) and potassium (K); for the first feeding, use a high middle (P) number, and lower (N) and (K) numbers: 3-5-3 for example. For that second feeding, when the plants plants have just set their first fruit, you want a ratio around 7-3-5.

Cool nighttime temperatures are the bane of peppers. In fact, you should start worrying about cool nights long before frost is a factor. When temps are predicted to dip down to around fifty degrees F, we cover our peppers with two layers of row, cover fabric.

We permanently anchor our two covers along the north side of our beds so that they're always in place when we need them. We deliberately anchor the south side poorly, so that the covers are sort of automatically removed by morning breezes as they have to be lifted off during the day anyway.

When harvest time arrives, be sure to harvest the very first fruits that the plant sets as soon as they turn color. This will encourage the plant to set more fruit.

CANTALOUPE

There's a superfood that's remarkably low in calories yet sweet enough to be a dessert and costs less than a frozen yogurt. It's cantaloupe and it rates an A on the nutrition report card. The deep orange color comes from carotenoids, the same pigment that colors carrots. Beta carotene, which becomes vitamin A, is a high-ranking carotenoid, provided you get it directly from a food source rather than supplements.

Carotenoids are known to protect against cancer, degenerative eye diseases and heart disease. Carotenoids prevent the bad cholesterol (LDL) from adhering to artery walls by interfering with oxidation, the process that causes it to become sticky.

Another important element in the chemistry of cantaloupe is adenosine, a natural substance that prevents blood clots by inhibiting the formation of platelets, thus reducing the risk of stroke.

This juicy fruit is also a terrific source of potassium and vitamin C. More people are eating cantaloupe than ever before because it is nutritionally dense as well as delicious.

The quest for perfect ripeness is a sensuous one and some shoppers can be spotted gripping the melons like a bowling ball, sniffing for a sweet, fruity fragrance while pressing the stem hollow for a slight amount of give.

Farmstand Pharmacy

Avoid dark green flesh under the netting pattern as cantaloupe does not continue to ripen once it is picked.

Make a meal of this ultimate convenience food on a hot summer day. Just scoop out the seeds and fill the "bowl" with sliced bananas for a double blast of heart-protecting potassium power.

Add melon chunks to chicken salad or do as the Italians do and marry the sweetness of melon with the saltiness of prosciutto. Another pleasant contrast to the sweetness of melon is provided by pairing it with peppery salad greens such as arugula and watercress. Alternate cubed cantaloupe with watermelon, strawberries and other summer fruits on wooden skewers for a festive dessert that will appeal to all age groups.

SALSA

1/2 medium sized cantaloupe
1/4 c. Vidalia onion or scallions, minced

1/4 c. cilantro or flat leaf parsley
3 tsp. sesame oil
Juice of 1 lime
1/2 tsp. cumin

Chop melon into small pieces. Combine with onion and cilantro. Mix the sesame oil, lime juice and cumin in a cup and pour over the fruit mixture.

This can be served as a condiment for chicken, fish or green beans.

CHILLED MELON SOUP

2 small cantaloupe
1 Tbsp. honey
2 Tbsp. fresh lemon juice
1/2 c. orange juice
1/4 c. white wine

Cut cantaloupes in half, discard seeds and scoop out melon. Save the melon shells for serving bowls.

A decorative zig-zag pattern can be cut around the edge, if you like.

Puree the cantaloupe in a blender with honey, juices and wine.

Chill well and serve in the melon "bowls". Serves 4.

Emotions in Traditional Chinese Medicine

Traditional Chinese Medicine has a rich, deep emotional life. From the roots of this ancient healing art, acupuncturists and herbalists noted that particular emotions were related to organ energy systems. Grief is related to the Lung system. Joy is related to the Heart system. Worry connects to the Spleen system. Fear is linked to the Kidney system. Anger and frustration correlate to the Liver. Keep in mind that Chinese Medicine is an energy medicine so when we refer to the Liver, for example, we are not speaking of the anatomical organ (as in Western Medicine) but the energy system of the Liver.

Once, back in student days at New York Institute of Chinese Medicine, I was a senior intern and a woman in her thirties came to the clinic. I remember she had depression and looked very emotional. By the time she was treated, the tears started flowing. We had diagnosed her with Stagnant Liver Qi (Qi means energy and is pronounced "chee"). I said, "You feel emotional because the Stagnant Liver Qi is moving." She wiped her red eyes and said pointblank, "It's more the Stagnant Divorce Qi." I said, "oh" and went in search of the tissues.

It always comes down to the body/mind connection. Emotional imbalances can lead to physical ones and vice versa. It is very much a two way street. I see it time and time again in my practice and it continues to amaze me.

Many of us get our Liver Qi stagnated and not flowing properly. It is the bane of modern times. Any kind of long term frustrations and anger can eventually manifesting to physical symptoms. PMS being one we've all come to experience (directly or indirectly) with trepidation. Lively emotions and symptoms present a broad range of possibilities. Road rage might lead to splitting headaches. Unhappy relationships might lead to hypochondriac (flank) pain. Stress at work, if not diffused, can precede a churning feeling in the stomach. For me, last week's computer problems, certainly frustrating, lead to depression. My Liver Qi got stuck. Since I get weekly acupuncture treatments, I asked my acupuncturist to balance my Liver energy.

Joy is related to the Heart function. We speak of the Shen (the spirit) residing in the Heart. When the Heart energy functions well, there will not be any palpitations. Extremely joyous news, like winning the lottery, can injure the Heart energy, although that is a rare example of Heart disharmony. Actually, sadness and anger can cause their share of disharmony in the Heart Channel. This is another example of how someone getting a divorce might end up suffering from palpitations, although the EKG says all is well. We acupuncturists simply balance the Heart system and perhaps prescribe some Chinese herbs. Again, Kleenex is an important office supply.

Worry and brooding are related to Spleen energy and these emotions will almost always influence the digestive process, with symptoms like abdominal distention, nausea, lack of appetite or even obesity. Often fatigue is experienced, with the four limbs feeling particularly heavy. Included in worry, according to traditional Chinese medicine, is mental strain over a long period of time, similar to that experienced by a student or business person might have. These worries and lengthy periods of extreme concentration must be balanced with rest and rejuvenation.

Grief is a powerful, and stifling emotion. I had a new patient that did not present any symptoms of the lung system being out of balance. Nor did she have any intestinal complaints. When I read her pulse on the right hand first position (relating to Lung and Large Intestine), I found the pulse extremely deep. Since Grief and the Lungs are connected in Chinese Medicine, I thought to myself, "It seems like someone died." I asked

Oxygen – More Valuable Than Gold

Harold Coram, Executive Distributor for Global Health Trax, proudly announces Hydroxygen as the 21st Century Super-Energizing Nutritional Supplement.

Hydroxygen Plus and Silica Plus, distributed by Global Health Trax are being acclaimed by sports professionals and coaches as "the difference that is making the difference." Utilizing a very unique oxygenating process, these products have the ability to generate nascent oxygen by releasing oxygen and supplying it at the cellular level.

Utilizing all natural substances, Hydroxygen Plus and Silica Plus are made from the finest natural plant substances, none of which are on the "banned list of substances" issued by international, professional and amateur athletic associations. Athletes and coaches know that Hydroxygen Plus and Silica Plus give them the competitive winning edge.

However, not only sports professionals are discovering the benefits of Hydroxygen. So are the so-called "baby-boomers", and the young and old as well. Anyone with a desire to live a healthier and less medical challenging life should at least give these products a try.

Ed McCabe [Mr. Oxygen] an internationally acclaimed best selling author and lecturer, well known for his extensive oxygen research, was the first person in history to make the American and international general public aware of the benefits of oxygen therapies. He has been lecturing worldwide for over a decade and happily endorses the Hydroxygen products supplied by Global Health Trax.

Mr. McCabe states: "Most bacteria, viruses, fungi, parasites, and other pathogens that contribute to diseases are anaerobic, and cannot live in high levels of oxygen! So, if we safely and properly flood our bodies with oxygen, what happens to the offending toxins and microbes, the two causes of all disease and aging? The two main causes of disease and aging are eliminated!"

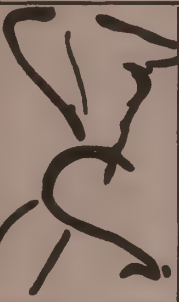

Mr. McCabe further states: "Other products may say they are delivering electrons or life forces to the body, but Hydroxygen Plus consolidates the electrons PLUS oxygen, hydrogen, amino acids, enzymes and minerals! A great buy!"

You may be experiencing some of the warning signs that your body is suffering from an oxygen or nutrient deficiency if you have: Wrinkles, No Energy, Memory Loss, Allergies, Aging Skin, Aching Joints, Brittle Dry Nails, Cellulite, Hair Loss, Immune Dysfunction, Skin Eruptions, Indigestion, Vision Problems, and Nail or Foot Fungus.

Distributorship and ordering information is available to those interested in this amazing product from Global Health Trax. To receive a free InfoPak on the product and the business opportunity, simply call 1-800-335-0603 - Fax 1-413-487-0962; or email to hcoram@i1.net with GHT PR in subject line. Info will be rushed to you immediately.

my patient if she has had a lot of grief. She told me her brother had died a year ago and that she was having trouble getting over it. I was amazed at how I was able to divine my premonition based on her pulse.

Another time I asked a patient getting over a chronic bronchial infection if she was feeling particularly sad. I explained that Grief and Lung energy are correlated. She admitted that in fact she was feeling very sad and did not know why. Chinese Medicine explains it.

Fear relates to the Kidney system. Anxiety and shock are fear's cousins. A typical example of this might be small children having issues with enuresis (bedwetting) because of stress within the family and their anxiety over their lack of emotional security. With adults, long term anxiety may lead to mental restlessness or insomnia.

Where do we go from here? It is wonderful to have this information about the emotions, but how do we apply it? Well, thankfully, our culture is now allowing a broader spectrum of emotions to everyone, although old codes of silence and endurance still linger on the perimeters. I believe it is important to experience our emotions in a healthy manner and not suppress them. Physical exercise gets the energy moving. Emotional work of looking at issues, letting go of things and forgiving others enhances our health both emotionally and physically. A good cry can get the endorphins activated and is preferable to an illness.

Acupuncture can balance the emotions and address dominant emotions that hold us back from living fully. Learning to feel comfortable with a rich emotional life with an entire range that let us feel things deeply and move on to the next thing is something we can strive for and that we can have. It is our birthright.

Sondra Winenga, Acupuncturist is available by appointment to assist you with your health concerns. A graduate of both the New England School of Acupuncture and New York Institute of Chinese Medicine, and recently back from a trip to China, Ms. Winenga has always been fascinated by the body/mind/spirit aspect of Chinese Medicine. POLICE BLOTTER

The Southampton 7-Eleven has been allegedly used as a public urinal once again. This time two people were charged with disorderly conduct by Village Police as a result. William Gottlieb, 63, of Brooklyn and Seung M. Mo, 22, of New York City were both cited and released with a court summons.

Troy D. Hayes, 33, of Southampton was arrested for allegedly urinating in public when he was spotted by Village Police at the intersection of North Sea Road and Hillcrest Avenue. Hayes was charged with disorderly conduct and brought to Suffolk County Jail for violating his parole.

Meanwhile, on the Napeague Stretch in Amagansett, the owner of the Beach Country Store reported to police that an unknown defecator, defecated behind his store. The defecator left behind a trail of dirty napkins, thus ruling out an animal as the perpetrator.

A Montauk woman's 1992 Peugeot was destroyed when an electrical problem behind the French car's instrument panel turned it into a Peugeot flambé. The car was engulfed in flames in her Flagg Avenue driveway.

Also in Montauk, a guest at the Tipperary Inn had all of her clothes tossed off the balcony. While she was retrieving her stuff, someone stole her cellular phone. Police are investigating.

In the Northwest woods of East Hampton, a shrubby stealer stole ten shrubs from the front yard of a Landfall Road residence. The rogue landscaper made off with $700 worth of shrubs.

A Water Mill man awakened to the sound of an intruder rummaging through his apartment. The man chased the burglar out, but returned to find his wallet gone. The wallet reportedly contained over $1,000.

Another Water Mill man was at his Deer Ridge Trail home when a beer bottle sailed over the fence, landing on his back porch. Guests at his neighbor's barbecue allegedly tossed the bottle, and then taunted the man as they left.

Dan's LETTERS

MIND SURFING

Dear Dan,

The spring and summer of my life have always held a spot for you. Your pages fill my mind with fantasies and joys of which I can never have...but, "without thought there would be nothing at all"... So, I indulge in the luxury of your mind.

Thank you for these gifts.

As I enter the fall, I hope for a harvest of dreams from you Dan. Yours in "Mind Surfing."

HOME IS WHERE THE HOTEL IS

Dear Dan,

Your two stories - The $100 Million Gift and Reality

Check are right on. As a recent full time resident, I have become more and more angry at the lack of respect for our area (I work at Southampton Hospital by the way.) I recently sent an e-mail to the Town of Southampton regarding this issue. I think share or group houses are the core problem. If you want to build a house to live in, fine, but turning it into a hotel should not be tolerated. I spent a summer of Thursday nights in court fighting my neighbor who was tap dancing around the zoning laws. They were obviously turning their house into a hotel, but common sense was not allowed in these hearings. Enough babble.

As for Rennert, he is one of the lowest. Anyway, Right on Dan!

Pauli Dempsey
Southampton

RENNERT? RENNERT WHO?

Dear Dan,

One cannot quarrel with your choosing to kick off a public relations campaign for Mrs. Courtney Ross to secure permits from various town boards for her Ross School. (June 23 issue). One can forgive your blind-spot that the Ross School would become "a major cultural institution in the Hamptons" yet produce only 500 extra cars. But to the revelance to the Ross project of your negative remarks about Ira Rennert is unclear. You describe Rennert as "a close friend and supporter of Benjamin Netanyahu, former prime minister of Israel, who is currently being investigated for illegal activities." Are you implying guilt by association? You bemoan Rennert "closing off about fifty acres of Sagaponack from the public forever." The alternative? Fifty one-acre homes, will, indeed, close off fifty acres from the public "forever." You admit you "can't tell whether these are nice people or not," yet you imply that Rennert who donates money to charity (without fanfare) is "spending money on himself." You state that to the best of your knowledge "Mr. Rennert has never used his vast wealth to create a museum, school, medical research facility, or any other institution for the public good in America..." A little research would have revealed American beneficiaries...Barnard College and Columbia University, for a start. It is hoped tht town officials will decide the issue on its merits and ignore the propaganda.

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin
Oh most beautiful flower of Mt.
Carmel, fruitful vine splendor of heaven; blessed Mother of the Son of God Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh holy Mary Mother of God Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x). Holy Spirit you who solve all problems light all roads so that I can achieve my goal. You that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. I thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days. After 3 days the prayer will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

CHANGE & TOBACCO

At the end of 1998, Philip Morris USA, along with other major tobacco companies, reached an unprecedented agreement that fundamentally changed how tobacco is marketed, promoted and advertised in the United States.

Among other things, the agreement imposes numerous restrictions identified by the public health community as measures that are aimed at reducing the use of tobacco products by minors.

The changes brought about by the agreement are consistent with our goal to responsibly market our products to adults who choose to smoke. You've probably noticed some of the more visible changes, like the removal of our tobacco advertising on billboards; but there have also been other significant changes.

That is why we're here, in this space, in this publication: to share with you in the coming months the changes that have taken place and the things Philip Morris USA is doing to address tobacco-related issues.

Our purpose is not to debate, but instead to open a dialogue. For instance, we want to help address the problem of underage smoking and the issue of cigarette smoke in public places.

We believe we have a role to play as society addresses issues, and we'd like to let you know what our company is doing.

One thing is clear: the changes brought about by the Master Settlement Agreement—as well as other initiatives we are undertaking that go beyond the agreement—provide us with an opportunity to move forward and resolve tobacco-related issues.

We believe opening this dialogue will help bring us more in accord with public expectations of a responsible company in a changing world. For more information, visit our Web site at www.philipmorrisusa.com. If you don't have Internet access, please call 1-877-PMUSAWEB.
